THE REGIMENTAL ORGANISATION

THE COLONEL-IN-CHIEF

Her Majesty The Queen is Colonel-in-Chief and is supreme in all matters relating to the Regiment. Approaches to the Colonel-in-Chief on any subject must be made through the Colonel of the Regiment and Regimental Headquarters. Her Majesty became the Colonel-in-Chief of The Royal Welsh in 2006.

Her Majesty was Colonel-in-Chief of The Royal Welch Fusiliers from 1953-2006. HRH The Prince of Wales was the Colonel-in-Chief of the Royal Regiment of Wales (24th/41st Foot) from 1969-2006.

THE COLONEL

Appointment. The Colonel of the Regiment is appointed from serving officers of the rank of colonel or above, or from retired officers of the rank of colonel or above. If he is a retired officer, he should be permanently resident in the United Kingdom.

Selection of the Colonel of the Regiment is based on the wishes of the Colonel-in-Chief and senior officers of the Regiment, serving and retired, and subject to the willingness of the nominee to accept the appointment. The Colonel's tenure of appointment is initially five years, which may be extended by periods of five years.

Duties. The Colonel of The Regiment stands in the position as head of the regimental family to all ranks of all battalions of the Regiment, and to the wider regimental family, and it is his pleasure to devote his utmost energies to the enhancement of their welfare and the good name of the Regiment. His main responsibility is to safeguard the long-term health and success of the Regiment by promoting regimental spirit, maintaining regimental traditions and representing regimental interests. His duties are:

- To deal with all matters affecting the Colonel-in-Chief.
- To advise the Colonel Commandant of the Scottish, Welsh and Irish (SWI) Division on matters on which he may be consulted. These are mainly concerned with the domestic affairs of the Regiment, the recruitment of officers and selection for key appointments.
- To represent the Regiment on operational matters where a regimental view is required by the chain of command.
- To meet and approve potential officers seeking a commission in the Regiment.
- To advise and assist officers, warrant officers and senior non-commissioned officers in the pursuit of their military careers.
- To be the authority to whom all matters of regimental policy regarding customs and procedures will be referred.
- To maintain goodwill and liaison between all parts of the regimental family, serving and retired, including the reserves, cadets and regimental association.
- To foster county, city and town connections and regimental alliances.

He is ex officio:
• President of the Regimental Committee.
• President of the Regimental Association.
• President of the Officers’ Society.
• Chairman of the Trustees of the Royal Welsh Regimental Welfare and Benevolence Foundation.
• Chairman of the Royal Welsh Museum Trust (Brecon Museum).

Approaches to the Colonel of The Regiment by serving members of the Regiment will normally be made through their commanding officer and by retired members through Regimental Headquarters.

OFFICERS DEPUTISING FOR/ REPRESENTING THE COLONEL OF THE REGIMENT

In view of the size of the regimental area and the number of local links and representational commitments to be sustained, the Colonel of the Regiment will be assisted in his representational duties by those Royal Welsh ‘Red Tabs’ still serving; Red Tabs are senior Royal Welsh officers, who will normally be serving regular or reserve officers of the Regiment.

Role and Responsibilities. The Royal Welsh Red Tabs will assist in preserving the Regiment’s historic affiliations in the regimental area; promote recruiting and assist in keeping the Regiment in the public eye; and take a particular interest in the Regimental Association and cadets. When the Colonel of The Regiment is not available to take the salute at a regimental parade, represent the Regiment at a Sovereign’s Parade, attend an important regimental function or represent the Regiment on other occasions when a presence at his level is appropriate, he will appoint one of the regimental Red Tab officers to represent him.

THE HONORARY COLONEL, RESERVE BATTALION

Role. The Honorary Colonel has no executive powers but, like the constitutional monarch, he has ‘the right to be consulted, the right to encourage, the right to warn’. He will foster esprit-de-corps and promote the interests of the reserve battalion of the Regiment, and in particular he should:

• Represent regimental interests, especially among the civil community in the battalion’s recruiting area, attending significant civic and social events when appropriate.

• Advise and assist the Commanding Officer in officer recruiting. He will meet and approve the appointment of those who wish to be commissioned into the reserve battalion.

• Visit battalion training activities on a regular basis and get to know and be known by as many of the members of the Battalion as possible, particularly the officers, the warrant officers and the senior non-commissioned officers.

• Be consulted by the Commanding Officer and other appropriate authorities on officer appointments, particularly command appointments.

• Be consulted early about honours and awards so that he can make a meaningful contribution. The application for a Lord Lieutenant’s Certificate must be signed by the Honorary Colonel, whenever possible on the basis of personal knowledge of the individual concerned; the force of the Honorary Colonel’s support will add considerable weight to other citations at all levels.

• Act as a conduit for any matters of concern that might appropriately be brought to the concern of the Colonel of the Regiment, the Brigade Commander or the Chief Executive of the Reserve Forces & Cadets Association outside of the chain of command.

• Be available to foster mutual co-operation and goodwill between the reserve battalion and other elements of the Regiment.
• Advise the Commanding Officer as necessary on charities, funds, titles, dress and customs as they affect the Battalion.

The Honorary Colonel is ex officio a member of the Regimental Committee. As such he will be informed of and will contribute to the development of regimental policy, as it affects reserve members of the Regiment.

The Honorary Colonel will be expected to represent the reserve battalion, or nominate a representative to do so, at any meetings which pertain to the reserves called by the Colonel Commandant of the Scottish, Welsh and Irish Division.

The Commanding Officer will wish to make it as easy as possible for the Honorary Colonel to carry out his or her role. He will keep the Honorary Colonel fully informed, in regular meetings, by verbal briefings and by including the Honorary Colonel in the routine distribution of papers relevant to the activities of the Battalion.

Tenure. Reserve Army Regulations detail the terms of service for an Honorary Colonel including the tenure, which is to be for 5 years, renewable on application, up to the age of 65 years.

CO-ORDINATION AND STAFF SUPPORT FOR REPRESENTATION

Regimental Headquarters will co-ordinate the representational activities of the Colonel of the Regiment, the Regimental Red Tabs, the Honorary Colonel of the reserve battalion and Regimental Headquarters officers to ensure that all key commitments are adequately covered at an appropriate level.

THE REGIMENTAL HEADQUARTERS

Locations. The main Regimental Headquarters (RHQ) is located at Maindy Barracks, Cardiff, CF14 3YE. Maindy Barracks was the former depot of the Welch Regiment from 1881 until 1960 and was the main RHQ of the RRW from 1969-2006.

Wrexham, Hightown Barracks, Wrexham, LL13 8RD is RHQ’s North Wales office. Hightown Barracks became the home of the Royal Welch Fusiliers in 1873 when the barracks was built. It remained the depot of the RWF until 1960. RHQ RWF was located in the barracks until 2006. It is now the North Wales office of RHQ.

Role and Responsibilities of RHQ. The aim of the RHQ is:

To promote a strong regimental ethos and to support all elements of the regimental family in order to enhance the effectiveness of The Royal Welsh in peace and war, and in particular to promote recruiting, retention and community support.

Core activities will be focused on:

• Provision of support to the Regiment in its recruiting area in order to deliver fully manned regular and reserve battalions.

• Promotion of regimental esprit de corps and high morale based on a strong, consistent and easily understood regimental image and ethos projected throughout the Regiment, its recruiting area and the wider Army.

• Provision of appropriate welfare, benevolence and financial support to all parts of our regimental family.

The RHQ will assist the Colonel of The Regiment and act as the focal point within the regimental area for the management and co-ordination of regimental affairs. Specific functions include:
• Secretariat to the Colonel of The Regiment.
• Safeguarding the interests of the Regiment and representing the views of the Colonel to the chain of command.
• Secretariat to the Regimental Committee, the Investment Sub Committee and the trustees of The Royal Welsh Regimental Welfare and Benevolence Foundation, and the Regimental Association.

• Co-ordination of regimental support for soldier recruiting (in conjunction with the Commanding Officer of the 3rd Battalion).
• Regimental publications, publicity and information, including the regimental journal, the Regimental Secretary’s update letters, diaries and website.

Regimental liaison with:

• County, civic and ecclesiastical authorities in the regimental area, in particular those cities, towns and boroughs of which the Regiment enjoys the Freedom.

• Representing the Colonel of The Regiment at events as required.
• Small regimental shop, including supply of non-issue items of regimental dress and accoutrements.

THE REGIMENTAL SECRETARY

The Regimental Secretary is the principal staff officer to the Colonel of the Regiment and is responsible for the day-to-day direction and co-ordination of the work of RHQ. When promulgating regimental policy, he acts on behalf of the Colonel of the Regiment. He is responsible for liaison with the Colonel-in-Chief and the Honorary Colonel of the reserve battalion, and for day-to-day interface with battalions, 160 Brigade/HQ Wales, the Reserve Forces and Cadets Association (RFCA), County Cadet HQs, HQ Infantry and the Ministry of Defence.

He is secretary to the Regimental Committee and to the trustees of The Royal Welsh Regimental Welfare and Benevolence Foundation. He is also chairman of the Regimental Association. He oversees the production of the regimental journal and website and directs RHQ's wider public information effort.

He will represent the Colonel of the Regiment at functions which the latter or other senior Royal Welsh Officers are unable to attend and will always seek to promote the Regiment's good name, influence and interests in our regimental recruiting areas and within the Army.

Role and Responsibilities of RHQ Main
Those functions listed above that can most efficiently be run on a centralised basis will be concentrated at RHQ Main. This includes, in addition to regimental policy matters, such functions as financial management, officer recruiting, control of chattels, production of the journal and other publications.

Role and Responsibilities of RHQ Wrexham
The Wrexham Office covers all those functions that are most effectively and credibly delivered by a more locally-based regimental representative in North Wales. Community engagement functions are the vital link between the Regiment (and wider Army) and local opinion formers and the public, providing the conditions for successful regimental recruiting and public support. They include:

- The management of all regimental benevolence cases in conjunction with other stakeholders.
- Briefings, contacts and visits to engage the support of political, teaching, community and religious leaders.
- Sustained local media operations.
- Representation at important civic and other local occasions, including staff support to the Colonel of the Regiment or a senior Royal Welsh officer attending such events.
- Contact with local schools, colleges, universities, cadets and other youth groups.
- Casualty support, including hospital visits and funerals.
- Support to Royal Welsh Association branches within area.
- Arranging regimental events in area (e.g. freedom marches).
- Support to the antecedent regimental museum in Caernarfon.
- Support to the regimental chapel in St Giles' Church.
- Support to regimental recruiting within area.

THE REGIMENTAL COMMITTEE

The Regimental Committee consists of:

Chairman - Colonel of the Regiment
Ex-officio members - Honorary Colonel 3rd Battalion
- Commanding Officer 1st Battalion
- Commanding Officer 3rd Battalion
Co-opted members - Up to 10 x members as nominated
Secretary - Regimental Secretary
Administrator - Assistant Regimental Secretary

The Regimental Committee will normally meet twice each year, in March/April and October/November, under the chairmanship of the Colonel of The Regiment, to consider all matters relating to the Regiment and to advise on other domestic affairs of the Regiment. The meetings will usually be held in the Officers' Mess of the 1st Battalion in Lucknow Barracks, Tidworth (March/April) or the 3rd Battalion in Maindy Barracks, Cardiff (October/November).

The Regimental Secretary is secretary to the Regimental Committee and trustees' meetings.
THE TRUSTEES OF THE ROYAL WELSH REGIMENTAL WELFARE AND BENEVOLENCE FOUNDATION

The trustees of The Royal Welsh Regimental Welfare and Benevolence Foundation consist of:

- Chairman: Colonel of the Regiment
- Ex-officio members:
  - Commanding Officer 1st Battalion
  - Commanding Officer 3rd Battalion
- Co-opted members: Up to 8 x members as nominated
- Secretary: Regimental Secretary
- Administrator: Assistant Regimental Secretary

The Investment Sub-Committee will consist of three members of the Board of Trustees who if possible will have a background in investments/banking. They will meet with the Regiment's investment manager in advance of the full board meetings to review the regimental investments and make changes and come to the full board meeting with any adjustment to the strategy for the next 12 months.

THE COMMANDING OFFICERS

The authority of the Commanding Officer is paramount within the Battalion. Commanding Officers are ex officio members of the Regimental Committee and trustees of The Royal Welsh Regimental Welfare and Benevolence Foundation. They are responsible to the charity for regimental chattels held by their battalions. They are not to alter regimental dress, customs or procedures without the prior authority of the Colonel of The Regiment. It is the privilege of the Commanding Officers to use the cautionary words of command ‘Royal Welsh’ instead of ‘Battalion’ when on parade.

SENIOR MAJOR

The term ‘Senior Major’ is used in both battalions of The Royal Welsh to describe the appointment of the second-in-command of the battalion. This nomenclature was in common usage in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries when infantry companies were commanded by captains; there being only two majors in a battalion, the senior one nominally became the battalion’s second-in-command. He is to understudy the Commanding Officer in every way. He will normally hold the following appointments: senior fund manager, education officer, editor of battalion contributions to the regimental journal, unit security officer and chairman of the Sports General Committee.

THE ADJUTANTS

The Adjutant of a battalion will normally be of captain's rank and his tour of duty will usually be for two years. The appointment of an officer as Adjutant is a mark of distinguished conduct and ability. The appointment of Adjutant is one to which all junior officers should aspire and will invariably be filled by an officer of the Regiment. The Adjutant is responsible within a battalion for executing the Commanding Officer’s policy and orders. Irrespective of his seniority, the Adjutant’s orders on matters of routine and discipline, in so far as they represent the policy of the Commanding Officer, carry the weight of the authority of the Commanding Officer. The Adjutant is directly responsible for the standard of dress, turnout and discipline of all battalion officers below field rank.

THE REGIMENTAL ADJUTANT

The Regimental Adjutant, normally a direct entry officer of captain's rank, is situated with the RHQ The Royal Welsh. Ideally the posting period is two years but invariably can be shortened or extended accordingly. The Regimental Adjutant is responsible for several tasks that range between the G1-8 spectrum of Regimental affairs. These include the following:

- coordination and staffing for all Royal Welsh regimental issues and events.
• develop and sustain support for all Royal Welsh units (regular, reserve and cadets).
• plan and execute effective information activities and develop outreach capabilities to all members of the community and regimental family.
• lead with regimental officer and soldier regimental strategy to ensure The Royal Welsh continues to achieve the highest standards throughout all aspects of regimental life.

THE REGIMENTAL REPRESENTATIVES

Regimental representatives will be appointed as the focus of regimental activities at the following training establishments: Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst; The Infantry Training Centre, Catterick; and The Army Foundation College, Harrogate. It is their responsibility to promote and foster regimental spirit; inculcate a basic knowledge of regimental history, customs and traditions; and ensure that all regimental staff set the highest standards for young men and women to emulate. They will organise regimental social occasions and, when appropriate, arrange for the observance of regimental days. A small RHQ budget is available to support this activity. The regimental representatives are to regularly liaise with the Regimental Adjutant and RHQ over recruiting matters and to ensure that regimental training and promotional material is available.

REGIMENTAL POLICY

Regimental policy is promulgated through:

• Decisions recorded in the minutes of the Regimental Committee.
• Regimental Committee Instructions.
• The Regimental Handbook.
• Such directives as may from time to time be issued by the Colonel of the Regiment.

SECTION 2

THE COLOURS

HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

The Colours embody the spirit of the Regiment. They symbolise service to Queen and country and depict the principal honours and distinctions earned by our predecessors. The Colours are consecrated before they are handed over to the safe keeping of the Regiment and for that reason they must always be treated with the greatest respect and accorded the highest honours. Colours have been carried by the Regiment since its formation in 1689 and originally had a tactical purpose as the Regiment's rallying point in battle when soldiers fought in close formation. Defence of the Colours was of the utmost importance and the selected officers and NCOs who formed the Colour Party occupied a post of the greatest honour and danger. The saving of the Colours in battle has played a significant part in the Regiment's history. The current stands of Colours were presented to the Regiment by HM The Queen, Colonel-in-Chief, on 11 June 2015 in the Millennium Stadium, Cardiff.

DESCRIPTION OF THE COLOURS

In common with most other British infantry regiments, The Royal Welsh and its predecessors have carried two Colours per battalion since the early eighteenth century (prior to which a Colour was carried by the ensign of each company). The Colours of each battalion are of identical design except for the battalion number in roman numerals, which is embroidered near the top of each Colour and close to the pike. Uniquely a silver Wreath of Immortelles is carried on the Queen’s Colour of each battalion.

THE QUEEN’S COLOUR
A Silver Wreath of Immortelles borne around the colour pike. The Union Colour with the badge of the Heir Apparent with a circlet inscribed THE ROYAL WELSH surmounted by The Crown, together with 43 selected Honours from the Great War and Second World War. These are listed in bold at Annex B to Section 4, Regimental Battle Honours.

THE REGIMENTAL COLOUR
The badge of the Heir Apparent within a circlet inscribed THE ROYAL WELSH within the Union Wreath surmounted by The Crown, across the tie of the Wreath a scroll inscribed with the motto GWELL ANGAU NA CHYWILYDD; The battle honours of the regiment with a Naval Crown superscribed 12 APRIL 1782 subscribed ST VINCENT 1797. In the first quarter The Royal Cypher. In the second quarter the Red Dragon Rampant. In the third quarter the White Horse of Hanover with motto NEC ASPERA TERRENT. In the fourth quarter the Rising Sun. The Sphinx superscribed EGYPT above a laurel wreath at the base. There are 47 selected battle honours from prior to the Great War. These are listed in bold at Annex B to Section 4, Regimental Battle Honours.

The background to each regimental distinction is detailed at Section 3 and the battle honours are listed at Annex B to Section 4.

PRESENTATION OF COLOURS

Regular battalion Colours are now normally replaced every 20 years and reserve battalion Colours every 30 years. HM The Queen presented three stands of Colours to the 1st, 2nd and 3rd Battalion on 11 June 2015 at the Millennium Stadium, Cardiff.

LODGEMENT OF THE COLOURS

The Colours will normally be lodged in the Officers’ Mess in the charge of the Battalion Orderly Officer (BOO) and under the direction of the Adjutant. The BOO will ensure that the Colours and Coghill’s Sword are carefully secured under lock and key at night and during periods when the mess is unattended. He will at once report any damage to the Adjutant. Care should be taken that the Colours are always shown the correct respect, that they are only displayed on appropriate occasions and that they are not handled by unauthorised persons. The only persons permitted to handle the uncased Colours are:

- Serving members of the Officers’ Mess.
- Officers of The Colour Party.
- The Adjutant in the course of his duties.
- The Orderly Officer in the course of his duties (he may request another officer to assist him in casing the Colours).
- The Regimental Sergeant Major in the course of his duties.
- The Drum Major in the course of his duties.

Positioning on the Colour Stand. When displayed on a Colour stand, the Queen's (or Sovereign's) Colour is on the right with its pike crossing behind that of the Regimental Colour. The lions that sit on top of the Regimental and Queen's Colours must be facing outwards and the Wreath of Immortelles is to be faced forward with the written inscription at the top of the Wreath facing forward and the bottom end of the Wreath being placed behind the pike. Coghill’s Sword is to be positioned on the stand between the colours.

If the Colours are wet after being carried on parade it is the responsibility of the senior Colour Ensign to see that they are completely dried flat before being cased. When the Colours are being moved from, or to, their usual place of lodgement an escort is invariably to accompany them. If the Colours are to be moved any distance, they are to be cased. The casing is the responsibility of the Orderly Officer or either member of the Colour Party, as directed by the Adjutant. When the Colours are to be uncased on parade the Drum Major has the honour of carrying out this duty in accordance with the procedure laid down in ‘Ceremonial for The Army’.

PROCEDURE FOR CASING, UNCASING AND DRESSING THE COLOURS

Casing a Colour. The Ensign or Orderly Officer will hold the Colour in a horizontal position. His/her assistant, who according to the circumstances may be another officer or, on parade, the Drum Major, will take the top of the Colour pike in his left hand and, with his right hand, take hold of the bottom right-hand corner of the Colour, the Ensign at the same time taking hold of the bottom left-hand corner. The edge of the Colour will then be lifted and placed over the top of the pike. This procedure is repeated twice, care being taken to ensure there are no creases, so that the whole Colour is neatly rolled along the top of the pike. The cord with tassels will then be wrapped three times around the Colour, the end being grasped by the Ensign and passed around the pike. The leather case will then be slipped over the Colour; care being taken to ensure that the Colour is not creased in any way and ensuring that the correct sleeve is placed over the Regimental Colour. Finally, the Ensign will raise the Colour to the order and his assistant will tie the tapes of the case.

Uncasing a Colour. When uncasing a Colour, the procedure described above is carried out in reverse. All subalterns are to be instructed in this drill on first doing duty as Battalion Orderly Officer.

Dressing a Colour. When a Colour is uncased the Colour Ensign will Dress the Colour. This consists of taking the left-hand top corner (the free end) with his left hand and bringing the Colour to a perpendicular position. This will result in the lowest falling straight down the pike. The Colour will then be even distributed on either side of the pike, and when carried on the shoulder the pike will always be covered by the overhang of the Colour. The cord and tassel must hang naturally, parallel to the pike and with no obstruction. When changing arms, care must be taken to ensure that the same overhang is on the left shoulder as on the right. Should the Colour become disturbed, the Ensign may use his disengaged hand to put it back in the correct position. This is not a drill movement and should be carried out unobtrusively.

COLOURS PLACED ON THE REGIMENTAL DRUMS
On the rare occasion that the Colours are placed on Regimental Drums, the following procedure is to take place:

- Regimental Drums are to be placed in the form of three tiers with six side drums as the base, the bass drum as the centre tier and a tenor drum at the crown of the drums.
- The Colour Party are to approach the Regimental Drums with the Queen’s Colour on the right-hand side and the Regimental Colour on the left as the Colour Party are facing.
- There the Colour Party are received by two Regimental Field Officers; one is ready to receive the Queen’s Colour and one is ready to receive the Regimental Colour.
- The Colours are handed to the Field Officers simultaneously. Subsequently, the Colour Party draw swords to protect the Colours as they are laid on the Drums by the Field Officers.
- The Queen’s Colour is laid first on the opposite side of the Drums to where the Colour Party are standing. The pike is placed at an angle where the base of the pike is resting on the floor and the top of the pike is positioned on top of the highest tier of the Drums. The inscription on the Wreath of Immortelles is placed forward away from the Drums and the bottom of the Wreath rests above the rim of the top drum. The Colour is kept hold of by the Field Officer whilst the Regimental Colour is placed.
- The Regimental Colour mirrors the Queen’s Colour facing the opposite way with the top of the pike carefully placed on top of the Queen’s Colour. The Colour is draped flat over the Drums with the tassel hanging naturally over the Colour.
- The Queen’s Colour is then positioned flat over the Regimental Colour with its tassels hanging naturally over the Queen’s Colour and so the Queen’s Colour can be seen in its entirety but the Regimental Colour can only be partially seen.
- In order to retrieve the Colours, the process above is reversed.

COLOURS IN CHURCH

During a Church parade or other appropriate service, the Colours may be laid on an altar. The procedure is:

- After the choir and clergy have processed, the Band will strike up the Regimental Slow March and the Colour Party will slow march up the aisle to the chancel, halting before the altar rails. Arms will be carried, with bayonets fixed, and head-dress will be worn.
- The Senior Colour Ensign will then order the Colour Party to present arms. The Chaplain will first take the Queen’s Colour and lay it on the altar with the pike to his right and the Colour draped over the front of the altar.
- He will then take the Regimental Colour, place the pike parallel behind the Queen’s Colour and drape it with its pike to his left.
- The Senior Colour Ensign will then bring the Colour Party to the shoulder.
- They will then left/right turn and march off to their seats, where they will unfix bayonets, remove head-dress and take their places.
- At the end of the Service, the reverse procedure will be followed, and the Colours will be marched out of Church to the Regimental Quick March.
- In Church, all commands are to be given and drill movements carried out with dignity, reverence and the minimum of noise.

COMPLIMENTS TO THE COLOURS ON PARADE

Movement to the Parade Ground. Colours are carried on all ceremonial parades. Prior to a Battalion Parade, the Colour Party will form up at the entrance of the Officers’ Mess or another place of lodgement. The Colours are removed from their casing in the sanctity of the Officers’ Mess. There the Officer Ensigns are received by the Colour Guard. As a formed body, they will march collectively as the Colour Party with Colours flying.

Marching on the Colours. The procedure and words of command for marching on the Colours will be as follows:

- The Commanding Officer will order ‘Slope arms’, followed by ‘March on the Colours’.
The Senior Colour Ensign will answer ‘Sir’.

The Commanding Officer will immediately order ‘Royal Welsh’, salute to the Colours, present arms’.

The Senior Colour Ensign will then order ‘Colour Party, by the centre, quick march’.

The Band and Drums will then play ‘The British Grenadiers’, while, by a series of forms and turns ordered by the Senior Colour Ensign, the Colour Party will take up its correct position on parade.

When the Colour Party are in position, the Band and Drums will cease to play and the Senior Colour Ensign will order ‘Colour Party, present arms’.

After which the Commanding Officer will order ‘Royal Welsh, slope arms’.

Marching off the Colours. The procedure for marching off the Colours will be as follows:

- With the Battalion at the slope arms, the Commanding Officer will order ‘March off the Colours’;
- To which the Senior Colour Ensign will answer ‘Sir’.
- The Commanding Officer will then immediately order ‘Royal Welsh, salute to the Colours, present arms’.
- The Senior Colour Ensign will order ‘Colour Party, by the centre, quick march’. The Band and Drums will play Ap Shenkin and the Colour Party, under the orders of the Senior Colour Ensign, will march off the parade and straight back to the place of lodgement, where the Colours will be reposed in accordance with instructions issued by the Adjutant.

COMPLIMENTS TO THE COLOURS OFF PARADE

When Colours are uncased, all ranks passing them will salute. When uncased Colours pass an individual he or she will halt, face the Colours and salute or, if armed, present arms. Formed bodies will stand to attention and the senior rank will salute; if armed, they will be ordered to present arms.

When Colours are cased, compliments will not be paid to them but will be paid to the Colour Ensigns in the normal manner. All ranks will give precedence to a Colour Party marching with Colours cased and will stand to attention as the Colours pass. Compliments will be paid to the Colours, Standards and Guidons of other Regiments as to our own.

SERGEANTS CARRYING THE COLOURS

In extremis and during specific Regimental days such as St David’s Day, the Sergeants’ Mess will handle the Colours. The Regiment has a long history of sergeants carrying the Colours during battle when the officers charged with their safety had been incapacitated. Sergeant (later Major General) Luke O’Connor was awarded his Victoria Cross at the Battle of Alma during the Crimean War doing just this. When the Colours are to be lodged with the Sergeants’ Mess the Colour Party along with the Officer Colour Ensigns will march and present the Colours to the Sergeants’ Mess where the Ensigns will hand over the Colours to the Sergeant Ensigns. The Sergeant Ensigns are to handle and protect the Colours in a manner no different to the treatment of the Colours with an officer ensign.

LAYING UP OF COLOURS

When old Colours have been replaced it will be normal practice for them to be laid up in the Regimental Chapel, museum or other public/civic building in the Regimental Area in accordance with the decision of the Regimental Committee. In 2015 / 2016 the Old Colours of the antecedent regiments were laid up as follows:

- RWF in St Giles Church in Wrexham
- RRW in the Regimental Chapel in Llandaff Cathedral, Cardiff
- RWR in St Mary’s Church in Swansea
The procedure for the replacement and laying up of old Colours is set out in Queen’s Regulations. The ceremonial and form of prayer appropriate to the laying up of Colours is laid down for guidance in ‘Ceremonial for The Army’. The Colours of The Royal Welsh will be laid up in the Regimental Chapel in Llandaff Cathedral.

ACTIVE SERVICE

When a battalion proceeds on active service and local conditions are such that it would be inappropriate to take the Colours, they are to be sent under escort to be deposited for safe-keeping, normally at Regimental Headquarters or with a battalion rear party. Under no circumstances are they to be left in unoccupied unit lines.

SECTION 3

REGIMENTAL DISTINCTIONS

THE REGIMENTAL TITLE

The full title of The Regiment is The Royal Welsh (note the word Regiment after Royal Welsh is specifically not to be used). This title reinforces our long-standing regimental connection to the Sovereign and to our recruiting areas. The abbreviation of the title is R WELSH. Abbreviated battalion titles are 1 R WELSH, 3 R WELSH.

Commanding officers on parade should use the words ‘Royal Welsh’ as a cautionary command, rather than ‘Battalion’.

THE REGIMENTAL MOTTO

Gwell Angau Na Chywilydd

The motto is one of great antiquity and has been used by several distinguished Welsh families. The closest translation is ‘Better Death than Dishonour’; however ‘Rather Death than Dishonour’ is more commonly used. It was adopted for the 41st Foot by Lieutenant Colonel Sir Edmund Keynton Williams in 1831, in the year that he was successful in linking the 41st to Wales as The 41st or the Welch Regiment of Infantry. It is interesting to note that the motto of the 2nd Battalion the Monmouthshire Regiment, Gwell Angau na Gwarth (Better Death than Disgrace), taken in use in 1862, was strikingly similar.

COMPANY TITLES

In addition to regimental, or battalion, Colours, up until the mid-18th century, each infantry regiment had company, or marker, colours used to indicate company lines in tented camps. The colours were carried by the senior sergeant in each company, i.e. the ‘Colour Sergeant’. Likewise, the Commanding Officer and Adjutant would have their own marker Colours placed at the entrance to their respective tents. These company Colours have now disappeared except in the Foot Guards, the Honourable Artillery Company and The Royal Welsh.

Company titles, Colours and company crests in both battalions will be as follows:

A  Alpha Company, Red, The Rising Sun
B  (Rorke’s Drift) Company, Blue, The Prince of Wales’ Feathers

C  Charlie Company, Green, The White Horse of Hanover

D  Delta Company, Black, The Sphinx

E  HQ Company, Dark Green, Red Dragon Rampant

THE REGIMENTAL CREST
The Regimental Crest consists of the badges and distinctions taken from the antecedent regiments. It is a red dragon rampant within a wreath of immortelles, with the regimental motto, Gwell Angau Na Chywilydd, surmounted by the Crown. The crest forms the centre badges of the drums, colour belts and other accoutrements. It is the crest of the Regimental Association.

THE CAP BADGE

The cap badge is shown below in full colour and should be used on stationery, invitation, greeting and business cards, menus, place cards, band programmes, crockery, regimental plaques and all sportswear:

REGIMENTAL FLAG

DISTINCTIONS

The uniforms worn by officers and soldiers in The Royal Welsh reflect a significant part of the history of their antecedent regiments. Over time, doubtless The Royal Welsh will develop its own distinctive customs and traditions and those it has inherited will evolve; but history reflected in the regiment’s dress and accoutrements provides modern soldiers with a tangible link with the past, and is a source of pride and individuality to its people and an essential element of esprit de corps.

The Regiment has been honoured with the following distinctions:

THE WREATH OF IMMORTELLES

On the return of the 1st Battalion 24th Regiment from South Africa after the Zulu war, Queen Victoria expressed a wish to see the ‘Isandlwana’ Colour. On 28 July 1880 at Osborne House on the Isle of Wight, she placed upon the Colour a ‘Wreath of Immortelles’ (a wreath of dried flowers) to commemorate the devoted gallantry and sacrifice of Lieutenants Melvill (who was the Adjutant) and Coghill and the ‘Noble Defence’ of Rorke’s Drift by B Company of the 2nd Battalion. A letter from the Queen was received by the regiment via Army Headquarters in Horse Guards on 15 December 1880 stating that a facsimile wreath in silver was to be borne around the pike staff of both battalions for evermore. This unique but distinctive honour of carrying a silver wreath attached to the Queen’s Colour pike is maintained by regular and reserve battalions of The Royal Welsh.

THE ROYAL CYPHER

In addition to the Rose and Thistle within the Garter (the badge of the Royal Hospital Chelsea), the 41st Regiment or The Invalids, used the King’s Cypher and Crown from the time of the Royal Warrant of 1751. The Royal Cypher appears in the first quarter of the Regimental Colour.

THE RED DRAGON
The red dragon badge, like the Prince of Wales’s plumes, was granted to the 23rd Foot in 1714 on the change of title of the regiment to The Prince of Wales’s Own Royal Regiment of Welsh Fuzeliers, in recognition of service during Marlborough’s campaigns. It appeared on the 1742 Regimental Colour and its use was confirmed by Royal Warrant dated 1 July 1751 when it was described as one of the devices of Edward, the Black Prince. The design is a dragon rampant and remained remarkably uniform through nearly 300 years. It appears in the second quarter on the Regimental Colour, and on the collar badges and regimental buttons.

THE WHITE HORSE OF HANOVER

This device was awarded to 23rd Foot, but its adoption by the regiment is uncertain. It, together with the motto NEC ASPERA TERRENT, was not authorised officially for 23rd Foot until the 1835 Royal Warrant. The confusion about adoption of the White Horse of Hanover appears to have arisen because it was authorised as the badge for the mitre caps for all infantry Grenadier Companies in the 1751 Warrant. There are illustrations of soldiers for both 23rd and 24th Foot wearing the White Horse badge on their caps. The motto translates as ‘Neither do difficulties deter us’ or more commonly quoted as ‘Difficulties be Damned’. The White Horse appears in the third quarter of the Regimental Colour of The Royal Welsh.

THE RISING SUN

The Rising Sun was also the badge of Edward, the Black Prince, which was granted to 23rd Foot in 1714. It appeared on the 1742 Regimental Colour and its use was confirmed by the Royal Warrant of July 1751. The Rising Sun appears in the fourth quarter of the Regimental Colour of The Royal Welsh.

THE NAVAL CROWN

The Naval Crown commemorates the 69th Regiment’s action as marines at the Battle of the Saints in 1782. In October 1951 the Welch Regiment was permitted to associate the battle honour ‘ST VINCENT 1797’ with the Naval Crown. The Royal Welsh thus inherits these two naval honours. The Naval Crown appears at the bottom of the battle honour wreath on the Regimental Colour of The Royal Welsh.

THE SPHINX

The Sphinx commemorates the 23rd and 24th Regiments’ participation in the Battle of Alexandria in July 1801. The Sphinx on the Colour represents a battle honour even though it does not have a separate battle honour scroll. Beneath the Sphinx are ‘the Laurels’ again awarded to both regiments after their participation in the Peninsular campaign (1808-1814). The Sphinx with the Laurels appears at the base of the Regimental Colour of the Royal Welsh.

FUSILIER

Private soldiers of the Royal Welch Fusiliers were re-designated as ‘Fusiliers’ by authority granted in June 1923. The use of this rank continues in The Royal Welsh.

UNIFORM EMBELLISHMENTS

Facing Colour. The 23rd (The Royal Welch Fusiliers) was one of the earliest regiments to be granted the appellation of a royal regiment, receiving it in 1712. It is a privilege, but the honour confers neither precedence nor seniority. All royal regiments were, and are, distinguished by royal-blue facings, but since 1935 regiments awarded the honour have been granted permission, at their request, to retain their original facings. The Royal Welsh therefore continues the tradition of The Royal Welch Fusiliers by retaining royal-blue facings (i.e. cuffs and collars) on red tunics when full dress and with officers’ mess dress jackets. However, the distinctive grass-green facings of The Royal Regiment of Wales, which date back to 1717 when Thomas Howard was Colonel of the 24th, is reflected in the design of the Regimental Colour, the drums of the regiment, officers’ mess kit vest and the regimental belts worn by the Colour Ensigns, Drum Majors, Goat Majors and Goat Mascots’ coats.

THE CAP BADGE

This badge or device was granted to the 23rd Foot in 1714 on the change of title of the regiment to “The Prince of Wales’s Own Royal Regiment of Welsh Fuseliers”, in recognition of service during Marlborough’s campaigns. It first appeared on the Colours in 1742. It consists of three white feathers (or plumes) behind a gold coronet. The scroll below the coronet bears the motto Ich Dien (German for ‘I Serve’). For 41st Foot, the use of Prince of Wales’s Plumes was authorised in 1831 and the badge appeared as a device together with the regimental motto on the Colours presented to the 41st in 1841. This badge with a scroll with the words ‘THE ROYAL WELSH’ is used today as the cap badge of The Royal Welsh.

The device is ancient and is thought to have originated with Edward, the Black Prince, eldest son of Edward III. According to legend, the Black Prince obtained the arms from John of Bohemia, with whom he fought in the Battle of Crécy in 1346. After the battle, the prince went over to the body of the dead king (whom he admired for his bravery) and took his helmet, lined with ostrich feathers. The feathers and the dead king’s motto made up the prince’s new badge and came to be used by subsequent Princes of Wales. Technically, the badge should be described as the Duke of Cornwall’s plumes or feathers, as the badge is that of the eldest son of the sovereign, whether or not he has been invested as Prince of Wales.

This badge within a red background appears as the centre badge on both the Queen’s and the Regimental Colours of The Royal Welsh. This privilege is unique to The Royal Welsh as the centre of the Queen’s Colour for other British regiments is left blank.

CAP BADGE BACKING

Soldiers wear a silver anodised version with a green square backing. Officers and warrant officers wear an embroidered version, with the edging in green integral to the badge when used with a beret, and blue-edged when worn with the No1 dress cap. A larger version of the cap badge is used in the front of seal-skin caps and on the front of ceremonial pioneers’ aprons when in ceremonial dress.

THE FLASH

In the days when the soldiers had pigtails, they were worn powdered and greased. In order to protect their jackets, the pigtails were enclosed in what was known as a ‘queue bag’. In 1808 hair was ordered to be cut close to the neck and queue was abolished. The officers of the Royal Welch Fusiliers decided to retain the ribbons with which the queue was tied, and using an old slang term for a wig, they were known as the ‘Flash’. In 1834, when the 23rd Foot arrived in England, an inspecting general complained about the ‘superfluous’ decoration on the collar of the coat and the matter was referred to the King. King William IV was pleased to approve the Flash as a peculiarity whereby to mark the dress of that distinguished regiment. Until 1900 it was worn only by officers, warrant officers and colour sergeants of the Royal Welch Fusiliers, but in that year its use was extended to all ranks when in full dress. In 1924 it was approved for wear on ceremonial parades and when walking out. Today the Flash is worn by all who are badged The Royal Welsh, including regular, reserve and cadet battalions. The length of the officers’ and warrant officers’ flash is 9”; the NCOs’ and fusiliers’ flash is 7” long.

THE WHITE HACKLE

The custom of wearing the white hackle (or more correctly ‘a plume’) originated when, in 1702, the 23rd Foot was formed into a regiment of fusiliers and the grenadier company-style head dress was introduced throughout the regiment. Around 1709 officers began to adopt the wearing of feathers in their hats, and this was officially sanctioned in 1789 when the colour of the hackle was laid down as white. The custom was continued with varying types of headdress up to and including the bearskin and Busby, and the solar topee worn with tropical kit. In 1950 it was authorised as a distinction in fusilier regiments. It is worn by non-commissioned officers and soldiers of The Royal Welsh.

OFFICERS’ RANK BADGES – THE EVERSLEIGH STAR

From about 1890, the officers of the South Wales Borderers took to wearing a unique and distinctive pattern of ‘Eversleigh’ Star and large (Edward) Crown as their badges of rank. These remained unique until 1928 when The Middlesex Regiment (now The Princess of Wales’s Royal Regiment) adopted a similar design. The origin is obscure, but the regiment continued to wear them, quite unofficially, until 1956 when they became formally authorised; but it was not until 1988 that they became a free issue. Today, the officers of The Royal Welsh wear large Edward Crown (with a crimson cushion) and Eversleigh Star rank badges when in No. 1 dress and in bronze (gunmetal) when in khaki No. 2 service dress. [Note it is pronounced ‘Everleigh’]. In combat dress, olive slides with black stars and crowns with insignia ‘R WELSH’ are worn.

COLLAR BADGES

There are four versions of collar badges worn by The Royal Welsh. The badge is a grenade ‘flamed proper’, with a dragon passant within a Wreath of Immortelles (qv) in silver gilt on the ball. All are of similar size. The position of the dragon depends on the type of collar and ensures that the dragon always faces inwards.

(1) Soldiers’ collar badges in anodised gold gilt for No. 2 dress.
(2) Officers’ collar badges in gunmetal for service dress.
(3) Soldiers’ collar badges in anodised gold gilt for No. 1 dress.
(4) Officers’ collar badges in embroidered gold for No. 1 dress, and full dress for officers, warrant officers and drum major, and for officers, warrant officers’ and sergeants’ mess dress.

BUTTONS

The dragon rampant inscribed ‘THE ROYAL WELSH’ is used as the device on regimental buttons. Buttons are bronze finish for officers’ service dress, gilt finish for No. 1 dress and anodised for soldiers.

THE HEADDRESS OF THE DRUM MAJOR AND DIRECTOR OF MUSIC

The official headdress for the Drum Major, Director of Music of the Regimental Band when parading in full dress is bearskin cap with the white plume on the wearer’s right. Curb chain to be Guards’ pattern.

THE HEADDRESS OF THE CORPS OF DRUMS AND THE BAND

The official headdress of drummers when parading in full dress is to be the white colonial helmet with Royal Welsh helmet plate.

THE HEADDRESS OF THE BAND

The official headdress of the members of the Band is the 1914 pattern helmet (dark blue) with spike and regimental helmet plate.

TACTICAL RECOGNITION FLASH

The Tactical Recognition Flash (TRF), which is worn as a distinguishing mark on combat clothing, displays the red dragon passant on a green background. The dragon faces right.
REGIMENTAL RANK/ TITLE SLIP-ONS

All ranks of the Regiment wear olive green slip-ons on the epaulettes or rank slide holders in combat kit as appropriate. These rank slides are embroidered in black with the title ‘R WELSH’ and the appropriate badge of rank.

STABLE BELT AND BELT BUCKLE

The colours of the regimental stable belt are the adopted regimental colours and are subdued hues of the colours of the former Welsh Brigade. Its description is as follows: blue (top 30mm), red (middle 4mm) and green (bottom 30mm), with black leather two strap buckle worn on the left side. For full dress, a white metal regimental buckle, for use with white buff equipment, is decorated with a Wreath of Immortelles on the female clasp and the Prince of Wales’s plumes or feathers on the male clasp, all in anodised white metal.

COGHLI'S SWORD

This sword was carried by Lieutenant NJA Coghill, 1/24th as he tried to save the Colour with Lieutenant T Melvill from the Zulus, during the Battle of Isandlwana, 22nd January 1879. Both officers were subsequently awarded posthumous VCs in 1907. The sword was collected after the battle, perhaps by those searching for the lost Colour, and returned to his family. It was presented to the Regiment by his nephew, Sir Patrick Coghill Bt. The sword always hangs below the Colours when lodged, as if to protect them, as Coghill had used it in 1879. The sword is always carried by the senior ensign on parade, who has the honour of carrying the Queen’s Colour.

HEAKIN'S SWORD

WO1 Heakin was the RSM of 1 RRW. He was murdered by the IRA on 12th August 1988 in the Belgian port of Ostend. His widow presented his sword to the Warrant Officers’ and Sergeants’ Mess. The sword is carried on parade by the RSM of the 1st Battalion.

THE REGIMENTAL GOATS

Both constituent regiments of The Royal Welsh marched with a goat at their head. It was apparently a custom of some long standing in the 23rd Foot, when in 1777 Major Robert Donkin of the Regiment wrote in his Military Collections and Remarks that ‘The Royal Regiment of Welch Fusiliers has privilegeous honour of passing in review preceded by a goat with gilded horns, and adorned with ringlets of flowers’, and that ‘the corps values itself much on the ancientness of the custom’.
Queen Victoria gave the first royal goat to the 23rd Foot in 1844. The first goat of the 41st (The Welch) Regiment of Infantry was adopted during the Crimea War (1855) though the reason why a goat was chosen as a mascot is obscure. The first goat from the Royal Herd was presented to the 41st Foot in 1862.

When the Welsh battalions were overseas, goats would often come from local sources, such as that presented by the Sultan of Lahej when the 41st Foot was serving in Aden in 1874. The 69th Regiment had no official mascot, but on becoming the 2nd Battalion the Welch Regiment in 1881 took up the custom. The 24th, the South Wales Borderers never adopted the goat as mascot. On amalgamation in 1969, the last goat of the Welch Regiment was re-named Taffy I of the Royal Regiment of Wales. His official name on the battalion ration register was Gwilym Jenkins.

Whenever possible the goats are selected from the Royal Herd which was started at Windsor in the time of Queen Victoria and is now located at Whipsnade Animal Park. In recent times, when no goat was available from the Royal Herd, the Queen has been pleased to present a wild goat from the mountains of North Wales, where herds still exist, particularly on the Great Orme at Llandudno. This herd is known to have some blood from the Windsor herd in its ancestry.

The goat is in the care of a soldier with honorary title of Goat Major. Following the merger of the two regular battalions, the goat of the 1st Battalion is named Llywelyn, and in the 3rd Battalion, Shenkin. The ceremonial coats for both regimental goats were kindly sponsored by the Welsh Rugby Union.
CEREMONIAL PIONEERS

Eight pioneers wearing white buckskin aprons and gauntlets and carrying their traditional tools, march behind the regimental mascots at the head of their battalion on ceremonial parades. This unique distinction was authorised for the Royal Welch Fusiliers in 1887. It is a reminder of times past when they prepared the route for the battalion before the days of good roads and bridges. On parade the pioneers will wear the ceremonial dress of the Regiment (see Section 17) with white aprons and gauntlets, highly polished ceremonial axes, spades and pickaxes and the sealskin headdress with large regimental cap badge. The Pioneer Sergeant wears a bearskin, carries a sword and should whenever practicable wear the traditional ‘full set’ of beard and moustache.

Nota. RGB codes should only be used for Microsoft Products, as the colour produced changes with screen resolution. The Pantone Matching System, or PMS in short, is a colour system that is primarily used by graphic designers and printing companies. By using PMS colours you are sure of receiving print work in the right colours. Pantone colours are marked with an unique number followed by a letter. The letter indicates the type of paper. For example, C stands for coated, U for uncoated, and M for matt.
REGIMENTAL SIGNAGE

Regimental signage follows the regimental flag design. It consists of a red dragon passant on a field of blue and green with the inscription ‘1st Battalion the Royal Welsh, Welsh Warriors’ or, for the reserve battalion, ‘3rd Battalion The Royal Welsh’ in English and Welsh.

THE REGIMENTAL DRUMS

The side, tenor and bass drums are to be emblazoned with the regimental crest and carry certain battle honours. The rims of the bass drums are to be painted in a dogtooth pattern: blue (outer)/thin red and green (inner). All drums were refurbished and repainted for the presentation of Colours by HM The Queen in June 2015.

THE SILVER DRUMS

ROYAL WELCH FUSILIERS (2nd BATTALION)

Prior to the purchase of the Silver Drums, the 2nd Battalion The Royal Welch Fusiliers were in possession of a set of ‘Brass Shell’ drums. These were 1858 Pattern with brass shell, complete with drag ropes, gut snares and a pair of ebony drumsticks. A drum from this set can be seen at the Royal Welch Fusiliers Museum in Caernarfon. The inscription on the drum reads: “This drum presented at Gibraltar in 1878 to 2nd Battn Royal Welch Fusiliers by Lieutenant and Adjutant Hon R H Bertie was repurchased by him in Hong Kong at Auction in 1900, when as a Lieutenant-Colonel he was commanding that Battalion”.

Note - The brass drums of the 2nd Battalion were sold when the silver drums were purchased from the proceeds of the auction of the loot collected by the Regiment from Pekin during the Boxer Rebellion in 1900.

One of earliest records of these drums is a photograph taken in India c.1912 which shows:

Twelve side drums
One tenor drum
One bass drum

The drums were placed in trust in Charity Commission scheme number A 128,751, sealed 6 October 1950. The second schedule, charity number 4, includes the following:

Ten silver side drums
Two silver tenor drums
Twenty-four silver-topped side drumsticks
Silver bass drum

There is also a manuscript list of drums property headed ‘2nd Battalion The Royal Welch Fusiliers (1950) Trust’ On this copy there is a pencil note by Major Peter Kirby, the former museum curator and expert on regimental silver which concludes ‘There are twelve Silver Side Drums – Ten with 1 RWF and Two with Regimental Museum’.

The holding by 1 RWF of ten side, two tenor and one bass drum was confirmed in the Property Register of 1 RWF Sergeants’ Mess property, compiled by the regimental museum c.1998.

The Drums today are held in the Warrant Officers’ and Sergeants Mess of the 1st Battalion The Royal Welsh at Tidworth.

SOUTH WALES BORDERERS (1ST BATTALION)

The Silver Drums of the South Wales Borderers are held in Officers’ Mess 1st Battalion The Royal Welsh at Tidworth. They were described in 1908 in Sheldrake’s Military Gazette as ‘the most magnificent and unique set in the whole of the British Army.’ They were created in 1908 by Messrs Potter and Co of Aldershot, and in all there are twelve side drums, two tenor drums and one bass drum. The heraldry consists of the Royal Arms, title, three badges and 19 Battle Honours raised from the sterling silver shells in repousse work. The cost was said to be in four figures (which in 1908 represented a huge sum) and caused a question to be asked in Parliament as to how an infantry regiment could afford them. However, because they were bought through private purchase by the officers of the South Wales Borderers, no public money was involved. In 1924 these drums were returned to Potters when the World War One Battle Honours were added. Whilst the drums are not used on a regular basis they were refurbished and used during the battalion’s tour of public duties in London, 1996-1998.

The Drums today are held in the Officers’ Mess of the 1st Battalion The Royal Welsh at Tidworth.

THE WELCH REGIMENT (1ST BATTALION)

The Silver Drums of The Welch Regiment were presented to the Regiment by HRH Princess Margaret on behalf of The Steel Company of Wales on the occasion of her visit to Port Talbot on 26 April 1956.

The set comprised of:

Twelve side drums
Two tenor drums
Two bass drums

The Drums today are held in the Warrant Officers’ and Sergeants Mess of the 1st Battalion The Royal Welsh at Tidworth.

All three sets of Silver Drums were refurbished for the Presentation of New Colours to The Royal Welsh by HM The Queen, Colonel in Chief The Royal Welsh on 11 June 2015 at the Millennium Stadium, Cardiff.

THE DRUM MAJOR’S STAFF

The Drum Majors Staff is surmounted by a silver goat, a practice which can be dated back to 1862 and could have been begun prior to that. This practice is continued today by The Royal Welsh and is unique.

For this action, he became the first Welshman to be awarded the Victoria Cross.

Rowlands later achieved the rank of general, and was appointed Colonel, Duke of Wellington’s (West Riding) Regiment in 1897.

7 May 1867
Assistant Surgeon Campbell Douglas
Private David Bell
Private James Cooper
Private Thomas Murphy
Private William Griffiths
2nd/24th Regiment of Foot
Little Andaman Island
Shared Citation

For the very gallant and daring manner in which, on the 7th of May, 1867, they risked their lives in manning a boat and proceeding through a dangerous surf to the rescue of some of their comrades, who formed part of an expedition which had been sent to the Island of Little Andaman, by order of the Chief Commissioner of British Burma, with the view of ascertaining the fate of the Commander and seven of the crew of the ship "Assam Valley" who had landed there, and were supposed to have been murdered by the natives.

The officer who commanded the troops on the occasion reports: about an hour later in the day Dr Douglas, 2nd Battalion, 24th Regiment, and the four privates referred to, gallantly manning the second gig, made their way through the surf almost to the shore, but finding their boat was half filled with water, they retired. A second attempt made by Dr Douglas and party proved successful, five of us being safely passed through the surf to the boats outside. A third and last trip got the whole of the party left on shore safe to the boats. It is stated that Dr Douglas accomplished these trips through the surf to the shore by no ordinary exertion. He stood in the bows of the boat, and worked her in an intrepid and seamanlike manner, cool to a degree, as if what he was then doing was an ordinary act of every-day life. The four privates behaved in an equally cool and collected manner, rowing through the roughest surf when the slightest hesitation or want of pluck on the part of any one of them would have been attended by the gravest results. It is reported that 17 officers and men were thus saved from what must otherwise have been a fearful risk, if not certainty of death.

1873/74
Lieutenant Lord Gifford
2nd/24th Regiment of Foot
Ashantee

For his gallant conduct during the operations, and especially at the taking of Becquah. The Officer Commanding the Expeditionary Force reports that Lord Gifford was in charge of the Scouts after the Army crossed the Prah, and that it is no exaggeration to say that since the Adansi Hills were passed, he daily carried his life in his hand in the performance of his most dangerous duties. He hung upon the rear of the enemy, discovering their position, and ferreting out their intentions. With no other white man with him, he captured numerous prisoners; but Sir Garnet Wolseley brings him forward for this mark of Royal favour most especially for his conduct at the taking of Becquah, into which place he penetrated with his scouts before the troops carried it, when his gallantry and courage were most conspicuous.

22 January 1879
Lieutenant Nevill Coghill
Lieutenant Teignmouth Melvill
1st/24th Regiment of Foot
Battle of Isandlwana

Shared Citation

He and Nevill Josiah Aylmer Coghill were pursued by Zulu warriors and after experiencing great difficulty in crossing the swollen Buffalo River, during which time the Colour was lost and carried downstream, the two men were overtaken by the enemy and following a short struggle both were killed. The Colour was retrieved from the river ten days later.

Melvill and Coghill were amongst the first soldiers to receive the VC posthumously in 1907. Initially the London Gazette mentioned that had they survived they would have been awarded the VC.

22/23 January 1879
Lieutenant Gonville Bromhead
2nd/24th Regiment of Foot
Rorke's Drift, Natal

Shared Citation
For their gallant conduct (Lieutenant G. Bromhead and Lieutenant J Chard (Royal Engineers)) at the defence of Rorke’s Drift, on the occasion of the attack by the Zulus on the 22nd and 23rd January, 1879. The Lieutenant-General commanding the troops reports that, had it not been for the fine example and excellent behaviour of these two officers under the most trying circumstances, the defence of Rorke’s Drift post would not have been conducted with that intelligence and tenacity which so essentially characterised it.

The Lieutenant-General adds, that its success must, in a great degree, be attributable to the two young officers who exercised the Chief Command on the occasion in question.

22/23 January 1879
Corporal William Allen (Allan)
Private Frederick Hitch
2nd/24th Regiment of Foot
Rorke’s Drift, Natal

Shared Citation
Corporal Allan and another man (Frederick Hitch) kept communication with the hospital open, despite being severely wounded. Their determined conduct enabled the patients to be withdrawn from the hospital, and when incapacitated by their wounds from fighting, they continued, as soon as their wounds were dressed, to serve out ammunition to their comrades during the night.

22/23 January 1879
Private William Jones
Private Robert Jones
2nd/24th Regiment of Foot
Rorke's Drift, Natal

Shared Citation
In another ward, facing the hill, Private William Jones and Private Robert Jones defended the post to the last, until six out of the seven patients it contained had been removed. The seventh, Sergeant Maxfield, 2nd Battalion 24th Regiment, was delirious from fever. Although they had previously dressed him, they were unable to induce him to move. When Private Robert Jones returned to endeavour to carry him away, he found him being stabbed by the Zulus as he lay on his bed.

22/23 January 1879
Private John Williams
Private Henry Hook
2nd/24th Regiment of Foot
Rorke's Drift, Natal

Shared Citation
A distant room of the hospital had been held for more than an hour, when finally, they had no ammunition left the Zulus burst in, and killed one of the men and two patients. Private John Williams however, succeeded in knocking a hole in the partition and taking the last two patients through into the next ward, where he found Private Hook. "These two men then worked together - one holding the enemy at bayonet point while the other broke through three more partitions - and they were then able to bring eight patients into the inner line of defence"

29 March 1879
Lieutenant Edward Browne

Sedd-el-Bahr, Gallipoli
Following the landing at Cape Helles V Beach on the Gallipoli peninsula, (during which Brigadier General Napier and the Brigade Major were killed) Doughty-Wylie and Captain Garth Neville Walford of the Royal Field Artillery organised an attack of the survivors of the landing party. The enemy position was strongly entrenched in an old fort on top of the hill above Sedd-el-Bahr village. The attack was a complete success due to the initiative, skill and great gallantry of the two officers, but both were killed in the moment of victory. Doughty-Wylie was shot in the face by a sniper and died instantly. He was the most senior officer to be awarded the VC during the Gallipoli Campaign.

Company Sergeant Major Frederick Barter
1st Battalion The Royal Welsh Fusiliers
Festubert, France

Captain Buchanan, on seeing this, immediately went out and, with the help of the other man, carried the wounded officer to cover under heavy machine gun fire. He then returned and brought in the wounded man, again under heavy fire.*

On one occasion, he carried in a wounded officer to a place of safety under circumstances of great danger.*

Myles was also awarded a Distinguished Service Order for his actions on 25 January 1917.

9 April 1916

Private James Finn (Fynn)
1/4th Battalion South Wales Borderers
Sanna-i-Yat, Mesopotamia

For most conspicuous bravery. After a night attack he was one of a small party which dug-in in front of our advanced line and about 300 yards from the enemy's trenches. Seeing several wounded men lying out in front he went out and bandaged them all under heavy fire, making several journeys in order to do so. He then went back to our advanced trench for a stretcher and, being unable to get one, he himself carried on his back a badly wounded man into safety. He then returned and, aided by another man who was wounded during the act, carried in another badly wounded man. He was under continuous fire while performing this gallant work.

20 July 1916
Corporal Joseph Davies
10th Battalion The Royal Welsh Fusiliers
Delville Wood, France

Prior to an attack on the enemy, Corporal Davies and eight men became separated from the rest of the company. When the enemy delivered their second counterattack, the party was completely surrounded, but Corporal Davies got his men into a shell hole and by throwing bombs and opening rapid fire he succeeded in routing the attackers, and even followed and bayoneted them in their retreat.

20 July 1916

Private Albert Hill
10th Battalion The Royal Welsh Fusiliers
Delville Wood, France

During the Somme Offensive, Hill's battalion had been deployed under heavy fire, for an attack on the enemy in Delville Wood, France, the order to charge was given and he dashed forward. He met two of the enemy and bayoneted them both. Later, he was sent by his platoon sergeant, to contact the enemy, and found himself cut off, being surrounded by over twenty Germans. He threw two hand grenades, killing and wounding about eighteen and scattering the remainder. He then joined a sergeant of his company and helped him to fight the way back to the lines. When he got back, hearing that his Company Officer and a scout were lying out wounded, he went out and assisted to bring in the mortally wounded officer, two other men bringing in the scout. Finally, he himself captured two of the enemy and brought them in as prisoners. His conduct throughout was magnificent.

22/23 October 1916

Private Hubert Lewis
11th (Cardiff Pals) Battalion The Welsh Regiment
Macukovo, Salonika.

While on duty during a raid, Private Lewis was twice wounded on reaching the enemy trenches, but refused to be attended to. He was wounded again while searching enemy dug-outs and again refused assistance. At this point three of the enemy approached and Private Lewis immediately attacked them single-handed, capturing all three. Later, during the retirement, he went to the assistance of a wounded man and, under heavy shell and rifle fire, brought him back safely, after which he collapsed.

19 May 1917

Sergeant Albert White
2nd Battalion South Wales Borderers
Monchy-le-Preux, France

Realising during an attack that one of the enemy’s machine-guns, which had previously not been located, would hold up the whole advance of his company, dashed ahead to capture the gun. When within a few yards of it, he fell riddled with bullets, having willingly sacrificed his life in an attempt to secure the success of the operation.

31 July 1917

Corporal James Davies
13th (Service) Battalion The Royal Welsh Fusiliers
Pilkem, Belgium

For most conspicuous bravery during an attack on the enemy’s line, this non-commissioned officer pushed through our own barrage and single-handed attacked a machine gun emplacement, after several men had been killed in attempting to take it. He bayoneted one of the machine gun crew and brought in another man, together with the captured gun. Corporal Davies, although wounded, then led a bombing party to the assault of a defended house and killed a sniper who was harassing his platoon. This gallant non-commissioned officer has since died of wounds received during the attack.

31 July 1917
Sergeant Ivor Rees
11th Battalion South Wales Borderers
Pilkem, Belgium

An enemy machine gun inflicted many casualties when it opened fire at close range. Sergeant Rees, leading his platoon, gradually worked his way round the right flank, by making short rushes, to the rear of the gun position. At 20 yards from the machine gun, Sergeant Rees rushed forward towards it, shooting one of the crew, and bayoneting the other. He bombed a large concrete emplacement, killing five of the enemy and taking 30 prisoners, including two officers and capturing a machine gun, undamaged.

31 October 1917
Corporal John Collins
25th Battalion The Royal Welsh Fusiliers
Wadi Saba, Beersheba, Palestine

When, after deployment, prior to an attack, his battalion was forced to lie out in the open under heavy shell and machine-gun fire which caused many casualties. Corporal Collins repeatedly went out under heavy fire and brought back many wounded to cover, thus saving many lives. In subsequent operations throughout the day, he was conspicuous in rallying and leading his command. He led the final assault with the utmost skill in spite of heavy fire at close range and uncut wire. He bayoneted 15 of the enemy and with a Lewis gun section, pressed on beyond the objective and covered the reorganization and consolidation most effectively although isolated and under fire from snipers and guns.

Collins was also awarded a Distinguished Conduct Medal for his actions at Foka and Hill 1750, Palestine 29 / 30 September 1917.

26 August 1918
Lance Corporal Henry Weale
14th Battalion The Royal Welsh Fusiliers
Bazentin-le-Grand, France

When the advance of the adjacent battalion was held up by enemy machine-guns, Lance-Corporal Weale was ordered to deal with hostile posts. When his Lewis gun failed him, on his own initiative, he rushed the nearest post and killed the crew, then went for the others, the crews of which fled on his approach. His dashing action cleared the way for the advance, inspired his comrades and resulted in the capture of all the machine-guns.

18 September 1918
Lance Sergeant William Waring
25th Battalion The Royal Welsh Fusiliers
Ronssoy, France

Lance-Sergeant Waring led an attack against enemy machine-guns and in the face of devastating fire, single-handed rushed a strong-point, bayoneting four of the garrison and capturing twenty, with their guns. The lance-sergeant then reorganized his men, leading and inspiring them for another 400 yards when he fell mortally wounded.

Waring had previously been awarded a Military Medal (LG 4 February 1918)

7/8 October 1918
Company Sergeant Major John (Jack) Williams
10th Battalion South Wales Borderers
Villers Outreaux, France

For most conspicuous bravery, initiative and devotion to duty on the night of 7th-8th October 1918, during the attack on Villers Outreaux, when, observing that his company was suffering heavy casualties from an enemy machine gun, he ordered a Lewis Gun to engage it, and went forward, under heavy fire, to the flank of the enemy post which he rushed single handed, capturing fifteen of the enemy. These prisoners, realising that Williams was alone, turned on him and one of them gripped his rifle. He succeeded in breaking away and bayonetting five enemy, whereupon the remainder again surrendered. By this gallant action and total disregard of personal danger, he was the means of enabling not only his own company but also those on the flanks to advance.

In 1919 he received the VC, DCM, MM and Bar from King George V, the first time that the King had decorated the same man four times in one day.

At the time of the investiture Williams had not recovered from his severe wounds, and during the presentation the wound in his arm opened up with the result that medical attention had to be given before he could leave the palace.

Williams is the most decorated Welsh non-commissioned officer of all time.

4 November 1918

Lieutenant Colonel Dudley Johnson

South Wales Borderers (Commanding 2nd Battalion The Royal Sussex Regiment)

Sambre Canal, France

On 4 November 1918 at Sambre Canal, France, the 2nd Infantry Brigade, of which the 2nd Battalion, The Royal Sussex Regiment formed part, was ordered to cross by the lock south of Catillon. The position was strong and the assaulting and bridging parties were halted on arrival at the waterway 100 yards from the canal by a heavy barrage. At this point Lieutenant-Colonel Johnson arrived and personally led an assault but heavy fire again broke up the attack. He reorganised the assaulting and bridging parties and this time effected a crossing, but the success of this dangerous operation was entirely due to his splendid leadership.

Johnson had previously been awarded a Distinguished Service Order for his actions at Tsingtao, China in 1914. At his VC investiture on 14 June 1919, he also received a Bar to his Distinguished Service Order, and a Military Cross for subsequent actions he was involved in.

Johnson later achieved the rank of major general, and became Colonel, South Wales Borderers 1944-1950.

16 August 1944

Lieutenant Tasker Watkins

1st/5th The Welch Regiment

Normandy, France

Lieutenant Watkins' company came under murderous machine-gun fire while advancing through corn fields set with booby traps. The only officer left, Lieutenant Watkins led a bayonet charge with his 30 remaining men against 50 enemy infantry, practically wiping them out. Finally, at dusk, separated from the rest of the battalion, he ordered his men to scatter and after he had personally charged and silenced an enemy machine-gun post, he brought them back to safety. His superb leadership not only saved his men, but decisively influenced the course of the battle.

Watkins, born in Nelson in 1918, later achieved the rank of major, and on leaving the Army, studied law. He was called to the bar at the Middle Temple in 1948. He became the first Senior Presiding Judge in 1983 and Deputy Chief Justice in 1988, a post in which he continued to serve until retiring from the bench in 1993. He became president of the Welsh Rugby Union in 1993, overseeing the switch from the amateur era to professionalism and the move from club to regional rugby in Wales. He stepped down on 26 September 2004.

Watkins was knighted in 1971. He was made a member of the Privy Council in 1980. He was appointed Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the British Empire (GBE) in 1990. In April 2006 he was made a Freeman of the City of Cardiff. He died on 9 September 2007.

2 April 1945

Corporal Edward Chapman

3rd Battalion The Monmouthshire Regiment

Teutoburger Wald, Germany
Corporal Chapman was advancing with his section in single file along a narrow track when the enemy suddenly opened fire with machine guns at short range, inflicting heavy casualties and causing some confusion. Corporal Chapman immediately ordered his section to take cover and, seizing the Bren gun, he advanced alone, firing the gun from his hip, and mowed down the enemy at point blank range, forcing them to retire in disorder. At this point, however, his Company was ordered to withdraw but Corporal Chapman and his section were still left in their advanced position, as the order could not be got forward to them. The enemy then began to close up to Corporal Chapman and his isolated section and, under cover of intense machine gun fire, they made determined charges with the bayonet. Corporal Chapman again rose with his Bren gun to meet the assaults and on each occasion halted their advance. He had now nearly run out of ammunition. Shouting to his section for more bandoliers, he dropped into a fold in the ground and covered those bringing up the ammunition by lying on his back and firing the Bren gun over his shoulder.

A party of Germans made every effort to eliminate him with grenades, but with reloaded magazine he closed with them and once again drove the enemy back with considerable casualties. During the withdrawal of his Company, the Company Commander had been severely wounded and left lying in the open a short distance from Corporal Chapman. Satisfied that his section was now secure, at any rate for the moment, he went out alone under withering fire and carried his company commander for 50 yards to comparative safety. On the way a sniper hit the officer again, wounding Corporal Chapman in the hip and, when he reached our lines, it was discovered that the officer had been killed. In spite of his wound, Corporal Chapman refused to be evacuated and went back to his company until the position was fully restored two hours later.

Throughout the action Corporal Chapman displayed outstanding gallantry and superb courage. Single-handed he repulsed the attacks of well-led, determined troops and gave his battalion time to reorganise on a vital piece of ground overlooking the only bridge across the canal. His magnificent bravery played a very large part in the capture of this vital ridge and in the successful development of subsequent operations.

Chapman later achieved the rank of company sergeant major. In the Coronation Honours List of 1953, he was awarded the British Empire Medal for services to the Territorial Army. He died on 3 February 2002 age 82.

Albert Medal Gold (1st Class) (George Cross)
30 March 1916
Sgt Albert Ford
17th Battalion The Royal Welch Fusiliers
Gorre, France

At Gorre, on the 30th March 1916, while a class of men was under instruction in bombing, a member of the class hit with his bomb the traverse in front of him, so that the smoking bomb fell into the trench. The man immediately ran away, knocking down Sergeant Ford, who was acting as instructor. Ford at once recovered his feet, pushed past the man, and managed to pick up the bomb and throw it clear; it exploded immediately it left his hand.

The Albert Medal in gold was abolished in 1949, being replaced by the George Cross. In 1971, the Albert Medal was discontinued (along with the Edward Medal) and all living recipients were invited to exchange the award for the George Cross. From the total of 64 eligible to exchange, 49 took up the option, including Sgt Ford.

ANNEX B TO SECTION 4
REGIMENTAL BATTLE HONOURS

The award of a battle honour is a system by which the Sovereign recognises the presence of a regiment at, and its contribution to, a particular battle. It provides, also, a means by which that regiment publicises its past glories. In earliest times the honour had to be a victory. However, the rules have varied over the years and a number of actions which were not victories are now honours. Today, claims are made to a Battle Honours Committee which recommends the award of the honour and sets out the date limits of the honour.
Those below in bold are borne on the Colours (The honours for Egypt, The Saints and St Vincent do not have separate scrolls as they are incorporated as part of the distinctive badges emblazoned on the Regimental Colour):

Namur 1695, Blenheim, Ramillies, Oudenarde, Malplaquet, Dettingen, Minden, Belleisle, Martinique 1762, 1809, India, Cape of Good Hope 1806, Corunna, Talavera, Bourbon, Busaco, Fuentes d’Onor, Albuhera, Java, Badajoz, Salamanca, Detroit, Queenstown, Miami, Vittoria, Pyrenees, Nivelle, Orthes, Toulouse, Niagara, Peninsula, Waterloo, Ava, Candahar 1842, Ghuznee 1842, Cabool 1842, Chillianwallah, Goojerat, Punjab, Alma, Inkerman, Sevastopol, Lucknow, Ashantee 1873–4, South Africa 1877–8–9, Burma 1885–87, Relief of Kimberley, Paardeberg, Relief of Ladysmith, South Africa 1899–1902, Pekin 1900.

Korea 1951–52

ANNEX C TO SECTION 4
REGIMENTAL HEROES

Below is a concise list of those members of antecedent Regiments who can be considered as ‘Regimental Heroes’. Whilst one could sufficiently fill this list with former VC winners alone, of which there are many within the Royal Welsh; the following have achieved the extraordinary on or off the Battlefield and are therefore singled out for particular attention.

ON THE BATTLEFIELD

Sgt Luke O’Connor VC

The Battle of Alma was the first major engagement of the Crimean War and took place on 20 September 1854. At 1445hrs the 23rd Regiment (the Royal Welch Fusiliers), as part of the light division, began their perilous assault on the Russian Grand Redoubt. Soon after the assault began the Ensign carrying the Queen’s Colour was killed; Sgt Luke O’Connor remembers:
‘Getting near the Redoubt, about 30 yards, Lieutenant Anstruther was shot dead and I was badly wounded in the breast with two ribs broken. Others then came up. I jumped up and took the Colour from Corporal Luby, rushed to the Redoubt and planted it there.’

Sgt Luke O’Connor continued to carry the colours for the remainder of the day; the Queen’s colour had been pierced by 26 bullet holes. He received the first ever Victoria Cross given to a serving soldier for his bravery. He later rose through the ranks to become Major General and Colonel of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers in 1914. The Royal Welsh is unique amongst Infantry Regiments as members of the Warrant Officers’ and Sergeants’ mess are permitted to carry our Colours on 20 September in remembrance of Sgt Luke O’Connor’s bravery.

Lts Coghill & Melville VC

The Royal Welsh in undoubtably unique for the number of Victoria Crosses awarded to its antecedent members for protecting the Queen’s colour.

On 22nd January 1879 the British Army was to suffer its greatest military defeat by indigenous forces at the hands of the Zulu army at the Battle of Isandlwana. When Colonel Pulleine, who was commanding 1st Battalion the 24th Regiment, saw that the battle was lost he ordered the Adjutant, Lt Melville, to save the Queen’s Colour shouting ‘God’s speed and God go with you!’ Lt Melville was joined in his endeavour by Lt Coghill, who had remained at Isandlwana with an injured leg. Both men began their ride through the swirling mass of Zulus and Redcoats in a desperate effort to get the Queen’s Colour across the Buffalo river to the safety of British controlled Natal.

Managing to break free from their pursuers both men reached the river and Lt Coghill crossed safely. Lt Melville was less lucky and, still clutching the Queen’s Colour, was unhorsed and thrown into the swollen river. He was carried downstream by the current until he was able to cling to a coffin shaped rock in the middle of the river. Lt Coghill seeing his friend in jeopardy dived his horse back into the river and was unhorsed in the process. Exhausted, Lt Melville lost his grip on the Colours and they were swept downstream, leaving both men to struggle to the far bank of the river. Lt Coghill, unable to walk due to injury, had to be carried up the steep slope on the far side of the river by Lt Melville. Melville struggled some 200 meters up the slope before collapsing against a rock, exhausted. Lt Coghill hauled himself to his feet and prepared to defend his friend from the pursuing Zulus.

The Queen’s Colour and the remains of the two Officers were found by a search party a week or so later; the colours were immediately restored to the Regiment. On the return of the 24th Regiment from South Africa, Queen Victoria expressed a wish to see the Isandlwana Colour and with her own hands placed upon it a wreath of immortelles (dried flowers). She directed that a silver replica should always be borne around the staff of the Queen’s Colour. There is still a silver wreath of immortelles atop the Queen’s Colour carried by the Royal Welsh today. Lt Coghill’s sword is carried by the Ensign to the Queen’s colour and stored alongside the Colours when not on parade so that it can continue to protect them as it did in 1879.

The families of Lieutenants Coghill and Melville would receive their Victoria Crosses in 1907. These were the first ever VCs to be awarded posthumously.

Pte John Williams VC

Private John Williams was only 21 when he found himself stationed at a small mission station known as Rorke’s Drift. On 22 January 1879 the station was being used as a field hospital for sick and wounded soldiers. When it came under attack from a force of Zulus, John Williams was posted to a distant room of the hospital to defend the sick and wounded, his Victoria Cross citation reads as follows:

‘Private John Williams was posted with Private Joseph Williams, and Private William Horrigan, 1st Battalion 24th Regiment, in a distant room of the hospital, which they held for more than an hour, so long as they had a round of ammunition left: as communication was for the time cut off, the Zulus were enabled to advance and burst open the door; they dragged out Private Joseph Williams and two of the patients, and assagaied them. Whilst the Zulus were occupied with the slaughter of these men a lull took place, during which Private John Williams, who, with two patients, were the only men now left alive in this ward, succeeded in knocking a hole in the partition, and in taking the two patients into the next ward, where he found Private Hook.'
These two men together, one man working whilst the other fought and held the enemy at bay with his bayonet, broke through three more partitions, and were thus enabled to bring eight patients through a small window into the inner line of defence.’

John Williams suffered irreparable nerve damage to his hands where the skin had been worn away from digging. He later rose to the rank of Sergeant and was posted to the South Wales Borderers Depot in Brecon during the First World War. He settled in Cwmbran where the local Wetherspoons is named after him.

WO2 John Henry ‘Jack’ Williams VC

In November 1914 John Henry Williams gave up his employment as a colliery blacksmith to enlist in the 10th Battalion the South Wales Borderers. He was promoted to Sergeant in January 1915. In July 1916 he took part in the 53rd (Welsh) Division’s famous attack on Mametz wood and was awarded a Distinguished Conduct Medal for his ‘conspicuous gallantry in action’. He received the Military medal in 1916 during the Battle of Passchendaele and a year later was awarded a bar for rescuing a wounded comrade at the battle of Armentieres.

In October 1918 John Henry Williams was awarded his Victoria Cross, his citation reads as follows: ‘For most conspicuous bravery, initiative and devotion to duty on the night of 7th – 8th October 1918, during the attack on Villers Outreaux, when, observing that his company was suffering heavy casualties from an enemy machine gun, he ordered a Lewis Gun to engage it, and went forward, under heavy fire, to the flank of the enemy post which he rushed single handed, capturing fifteen of the enemy. These prisoners, realising that Williams was alone, turned on him and one of them gripped his rifle. He succeeded in breaking away and bayonetting five enemy, whereupon the remainder again surrendered. By this gallant action and total disregard of personal danger, he was the means of enabling not only his own company but also those on the flanks to advance.’

Company Sergeant Major Williams was medically discharged from the Army on 17 October 1918 after having suffered severe shrapnel wounds. He was awarded his medals by king George V in 1919. This was the first time a monarch has ever decorated the same man four times in a day. WO2 Williams had not yet recovered from his wounds and had to receive medical treatment whilst at the palace to patch up a wound in his arm that started bleeding during his visit.

Pte Albert Hill VC

Raised amongst ten siblings Albert Hill was described as a weak and frail child. Nevertheless, in August 1914 at the age of just 19 he enlisted into the 10th Battalion the Royal Welsh Fusiliers. After two years of fighting, on 20 July 1916, Albert Hill found himself taking part in the fateful Battle of the Somme.

His battalion had been deployed under heavy fire and was ordered to attack Delville Wood. When the order to charge was given Albert dashed forward bayonetting two enemy soldiers. Later in the day he was ordered by his Platoon Sergeant to ‘contact the enemy’. Albert Hill did just that; finding himself cut off and surrounded by some 20 German soldiers he threw two hand grenades and fired his rifle incapacitating roughly eighteen and scattering the remainder. He then linked up with a Sergeant from his Company and together their fought their way back to friendly lines.

When he got back to his trench Albert heard that his Company Commander, Captain Scales, and a scout were lying wounded in no-man’s land. He immediately went out and assisted in bringing in the mortally wounded Officer. Following this, Albert Hill was responsible for single-handedly bringing in two German Prisoners.

Throughout the days ordeals Private Albert Hill’s conduct was described as ‘magnificent’. For his efforts he was awarded not only a Victoria Cross, but also the Croix De Guerre (the highest award for bravery in France) and the Cross of St. George (the highest award for bravery in Russia).

Sir Tasker Watkins VC
Following the outbreak of the Second World War, in 1939, Tasker Watkins enlisted as a Private soldier. After a year of service, he was selected for Officer training and was commissioned, with the rank of Second Lieutenant, into the Welch Regiment.

In June 1944 the now Lieutenant Watkins departed for France with the rest of the 53rd (Welsh) Division to reinforce the British troops that had taken part in the D-Day landings. By mid-August Watkins found himself unexpectedly in command of his Company leading an assault on a German Machine gun position. After all the other Officers of the Company had been killed, Watkins personally lead the remaining thirty men in his Company in a bayonet charge against fifty German soldiers. He then single-handedly silenced the enemy machinegun position and lead his remaining men back to safety. He was the first Welsh soldier of the Second World War to be awarded a VC for his actions; His citation reads that he 'not only saved his men, but decisively influenced the course of the battle.'

Tasker Watkins’ humility and integrity was exceptional; after the war he described his actions during an interview with the Daily Telegraph:

‘You must believe me when I say it was just another day in the life of a soldier. I did what needed doing to help colleagues and friends, just as others looked out for me during the fighting that summer... I didn't wake up the next day a better or braver person, just different. I'd seen more killing and death in 24 hours–indeed been part of that terrible process–than is right for anybody. From that point onwards I have tried to take a more caring view of my fellow human beings, and that, of course, always includes your opponent, whether it be in war, sport, or just life generally.’

Watkins brought that humility and integrity with him into civilian life following the War. He went on to study law and became the Deputy Chief Justice of England and Wales. In 1993 he became the president of the Welsh Rugby Union and oversaw the games transition into the professional era. A statue of him stands outside the Principality stadium in Cardiff recognising his exceptional service to the country of Wales and sport of Rugby.

Cpl Ted Chapman VC

Ted Chapman grew up in the village of Pontllotyn, near Rhymney. Leaving school at 14 Ted followed his father underground to work in the Ogilvie Colliery. As a miner there was no requirement for him to join the Army. Nevertheless, in April 1940 he enlisted into the Monmouthshire Regiment and took part in the D-Day landings in June 1944. He was wounded during the Falaise breakout but quickly returned to active service. He was awarded a Victoria Cross for his actions near the Dortmund-Ems Canal in Germany on 2 April 1945, his citation reads as follows:

'Corporal Chapman's section came under heavy machine-gun fire from German units dug in and concealed, causing many casualties. He ordered his men to take cover and went forward alone with a Bren gun, mowing down the enemy at point-blank range, forcing them to retire. His section isolated, Corporal Chapman again halted the enemy advances with his Bren gun, at one time firing it over his shoulder while lying supine on his back in a shallow fold in the ground, to cover those bringing him ammunition. He then carried in his Company Commander, an officer, who was lying wounded. Refusing hospitalisation, he returned to his section and ensured the consolidation of the ground gained which took a further two hours of fighting.'

He rose to become a Company Sergeant Major and after the war was awarded the British Empire Medal. He lived in Torfaen until his death in 2002 and was a noted breeder of Welsh Mountain Ponies, winning many accolades at the Royal Welsh Show.

CSgt Pete Humphreys

The Bosnian War of the early 1990s is probably best known for the tragic events that occurred near the town of Srebrenica. However, on the other side of Bosnia a similar tragedy was narrowly avoided due the heroism of members of the Royal Welch Fusiliers stationed to protect a thinly held safe zone around the city of Goražde. On 28 May 1995 the shakily held peace between the Serbian troops outside the town and the Bosnian troops inside was about to collapse under the weight of a massive Serbian offensive. Caught in the middle the lightly armed Royal Welch Fusiliers, holding the small observation posts that ringed the city, could easily have let the Serbian troops past, allowing a massacre as happened in Srebrenica. Fortunately for the Bosnians inside Goražde the Royal Welch Fusiliers held the line, despite being attacked by overwhelming Serbian forces.

CSgt Pete Humphreys remembers his actions on the day.

"The plan at the time was to hold the observation posts for as long as possible. The Bosnians would push through us and take the high ground. But seeing thirty heavily-armed Serbs coming towards you, you think, 'it's time to leave this location.' There were rounds coming in from the Serbs. There were rounds coming in from the Bosnians. There were aircraft overhead, buzzing some of the locations."

CSgt Humphreys held his observation post until he was ordered to withdraw. When the call finally came his patrol surprised several Serb soldiers in their trenches.

"We had guns at the back of their heads before they knew it."

He and his men disarmed them and disposed of their weapons. He then led his men along the only possible route down to the city.

"There was a piece of ground that I knew was mined. I cleared it by running across the open ground, with the rest of the lads following in my footsteps."

He was to be awarded only the second ever Conspicuous Gallantry Cross for his actions. He undoubtably saved the lives of not only his own eight-man patrol but the lives of the many Bosnian civilians sheltering in the city below his position.

ON THE SPORT'S PITCH

Capt Charlie Pritchard

Capt Charlie Pritchard began his first-class rugby career at Newport, playing his first senior game at back row against Swansea in January 1901. He made his debut for Wales in 1904 against Ireland. He went on to play in a further thirteen international games including a game against the famous All Black touring side of 1905. Pritchard was singled out for particular praise for the part he played in the famous victory. He was singled out for his all-out defensive play; seen as the star of the Welsh pack he was 'always in the thick of the fight'. Fellow international George Travers summed up his performance; 'He knocked 'em down like nine pins.'

In 1915 Charlie Pritchard was commissioned into 12th Battalion The South Wales Borderers. He was promoted Captain in November 1915 and travelled to the Western Front in June 1916. On the night of 12 August, he led a trench raid near Loos to capture a German prisoner. The raid was successful, but Capt Pritchard was seriously wounded and taken to a casualty clearing station a few miles behind the front. His last reported words were to ask if they had captured the prisoner, when informed that they had, he replied 'Well I have done my bit.' Capt Pritchard died of his wounds shortly afterwards.

Tragically, Carbine Wallace of the New Zealand Armed Forces died on the same day. Both men had taken part in the famous 1905 test match, Pritchard playing for Wales and Wallace for the All Blacks.

Capt Maxwell 'Max' Woosnam

Often referred to as the 'Greatest British sportsman, Capt Woosnam served alongside Siegfried Sassoon, in The Royal Welsh Fusiliers, first on the Western Front and later in the Gallipoli campaign.

It is for his sporting prowess that Woosnam is best remembered; he started young, scoring 133 not out in a test at Lords against the Marylebone Cricket Club whilst still a schoolboy. He went on to play football for Corinthians FC and was touring with them in Brazil, in 1914, when war broke out. After a quick stop in Rio De Janeiro, the team decided to return to Britain to enlist, dodging U-boats and torpedoes on the return journey. He took part in numerous wartime sporting events. Including a football match between enlisted members of his old club and Aldershot command and a Military vs Queen's Club tennis match.
Post-War, Woosnam continued his amateur sporting career. He was a finalist in the 1919 All England Plate tennis tournament. Following this he entered Wimbledon for the first time in both the singles and doubles tournaments. He would go on to win the Wimbledon doubles and mixed doubles title in 1921. In the intervening years he played for and captained Chelsea football club and signed for Manchester City Football club, continuing to play and captain the side until 1926. This was highly unusual for an amateur amongst professionals. He also won a doubles gold medal and a mixed doubles silver medal in tennis at the 1920 Olympics. Throughout his sporting career Woosnam declined many offers to become a professional tennis and football player, describing the idea as ‘vulgar’.

He is notable as being an early pioneer of table tennis and once beat actor Charlie Chaplin, whilst playing with a butter knife rather than a bat. He was also an accomplished snooker player, having achieved a maximum break of 147.

Capt George Latham

Hailing from Newtown, Powys, Latham joined his hometown side at age 16 and reached the fourth round of the Welsh Cup. At age 19 he volunteered for service in the Second Boer War in South Africa and joined 5th Battalion The South Wales Borderers as a Private soldier. He served for 14 months and saw action at Brandfort and Potchefstroom; he left the Army as a Corporal.

George Latham made his debut for Wales on 6 March 1905 in a 3 – 1 win against Scotland. He went on to win a further 9 caps for Wales before retiring to take up coaching. His final Welsh cap came when he was forced into action in a 1-0 win over Ireland in 1913 whilst coaching the national team.

Latham volunteered for service during the First World War and was commissioned into the 7th Battalion The Royal Welsh Fusiliers in 1916. After several months of training Lt Latham and the rest of 7 RWF found themselves serving in the Middle East in Gaza. It was here that Lt Latham was awarded a Military Cross for silencing enemy machine gun positions that were causing heavy casualties amongst his Battalion. During the Action Lt Latham was responsible for the capture of enemy soldiers from Austria, Germany and Turkey, a truly eclectic feat! He added a bar to his Military Cross in 1918 for his actions in Beersheba, in Israel and received a mention in dispatches by the Commander of the Egyptian Expeditionary Force.

During his service in the Middle East Lt Latham found played for his Battalion’s football team (7 RWF) and helped them win the British Forces in Egypt Cup Final in 1919. He ended his military career in 1919 at the rank of Captain.

On his return to Wales Latham took over coaching duties at Cardiff City and served as the British team’s manager in the 1920 Olympic games. In 1921 he was to become the oldest player to ever play for Cardiff, aged 41, after two of his players were taken ill shortly before kick-off. This record is yet to be beaten. Latham helped to coach the club to two FA Cup finals, marking one of the most successful spells in Cardiff’s history.

Latham retired from coaching in 1936 following a serious bicycle accident, he died in Newtown 3 years later. Newtown later named their ground Latham park in memory of this extraordinary footballer.

RSM Edward ‘Killer’ Richards

RSM Richards joined the 2nd Battalion The South Wales Borderers in 1934. Over the next 23 years he must have had a most varied and interesting career. He is remarkable not only for his exploits on the battlefield but also in the sporting arena.

RSM Richards successes in the boxing ring are far too numerous to catalogue fully here. But apart from representing the Army boxing team on numerous occasions, he beat the Light-Heavyweight champion of Wales, won the Ulster Championships, fought for England against Germany in 1938 and defeated both the Heavyweight and Light-Heavyweight Champions of All-Ireland. All of this was prior to the outbreak of the Second World War and if it had not been for this conflict, he would almost certainly have represented Great Britain at the Olympics. In 1937 he had the unusual opportunity to box for Denmark against England. Having comfortably disposed of his Danish counterpart in contest between the Army and Denmark, he was asked to compete in the Danish team when it met England later in the year. He won his bout against the then ABA Champion of Great Britain.

During the Second World War Richards served as a CSM in 7 SWB in North Africa and Italy. He was wounded in the stomach during the Anzio landings in 1944 and earned a mention in dispatches for his bravery during the engagement. He did not completely leave boxing behind during the war, winning the American Red Cross Tournament, in Tunis, in 1943. On his road to the title he defeated the American Ezzard Charles who would go on to become the World Heavyweight Champion.

He won many further accolades in the ring both during and following the war. He hung up his gloves in 1948 to become RSM of 1 SWB and finished his career as the RSM at the Brecon Training Depot in 1957. His sword hangs in the Warrant Officers' and Sergeants' Mess of the Royal Welsh.

Miscellaneous Interest

Capt Robert Barclay
In 1809 Captain Robert Barclay, a well known eccentric, walked a mile every hour for a thousand hours, for a wager of 1,000 Guineas (£1,050). This astonishing feat was emulated in 2003 by 2Lt David Lake of the 1st Battalion Royal Welsh Fusiliers. Who, immediately upon completing the thousand mile walk, went on to complete the London Marathon alongside six professional Ultra-Marathon runners. David finished an impressive third in the group.

Private Frank Richards

Frank Richards was brought up in the Blaena area of the South Wales’ Valleys. Orphaned at age nine Frank Richards was raised by his aunt and uncle. During the 1890s Frank worked as a coal miner before joining 2nd Battalion The Royal Welsh Fusiliers in 1901. He immediately saw service in India and Burma under the British Raj.

Pte Richards stayed with the Battalion during the First World War and saw active service on the Western Front. On 15 March 1916 He would be awarded a Distinguished Conduct Medal for conspicuous gallantry, his citation reads:

During a successful attack, Privates Richards and Barrett took their telephone over the parapet, established and maintained communication. They lay out in the open for three hours and repaired the wire whenever it was cut.

Only three months later, on 22 June 1916, German forces detonated a huge mine underneath British front lines as a prelude to a massive summer offensive. 2 RWF suffered terrible casualties in the initial blast, B Company alone lost 54 men instantly. Despite these huge initial losses 2 RWF held the line and halted the German attack. Pte Richards was one of the lucky few to survive the day and earned a Military Medal in recognition of his bravery under fire. The crater was henceforth known as the Red Dragon Crater due to the heavy losses suffered by 2 RWF and the bravery of the Welsh Soldiers who fought there.

Pte Richards is remarkable not just because of this bravery but because of his literary credentials. His account of the Christmas truce was the first to be published by a soldier. In 1933, he published his first book Old Soldiers Never Die – with the help of Robert Graves – chronicling his time on the Western front. He went on to publish a second book in 1936, Old Soldier Sahib, Which recounts his time in the British Army in India. He also features as a character in Captain Dunn’s The War The Infantry Knew 1914-1919, under the sobriquet ‘Big Dick’. This may not seem remarkable by today’s standards, but Pte Richards is one of the few soldiers to write about his service at the turn of the 20th century and his books give an important soldier’s eye view of the time.

Siegfreid Sassoon

Motivated by patriotism Sassoon would enlist into the British Army in 1914 when war with Germany seemed inevitable. Unfortunately, he broke his arm in a riding accident and would not see active service until 1915, when he was commissioned into 3rd Battalion the Royal Welsh Fusiliers. 2Lt Sassoon’s period of duty on the Western Front was marked by exceptionally brave actions. This included the single-handed capture of a German trench during the famous attack on Mametz wood. His actions were remembered by his friend Robert Graves in the book Goodbye to All That:

‘He went over with bombs in daylight, under covering fire from a couple of rifles, and scared away the occupants. A pointless feat, since instead of signalling for reinforcements, he sat down in the German trench and began reading a book of poems which he had brought with him. When he went back, he did not even report. Colonel Stockwell, then in command, raged at him. The attack on Mametz Wood had been delayed for two hours because British patrols were still reported to be out. “British patrols” were Siegfried and his book of poems. "I'd have got you a D.S.O., if you'd only shown more sense," stormed Stockwell.’

2Lt Sassoon's bravery was so inspiring that soldiers of his company said that they only felt confident if they were accompanied by him. He was nicknamed “Mad Jack” by his men and was recommended for a Victoria Cross for his exploits. On 27 July 1916 he was awarded the Military Cross, his citation reads:

‘For conspicuous gallantry during a raid on the enemy's trenches. He remained for 1½ hours under rifle and bomb fire collecting and bringing in our wounded. Owing to his courage and determination all the killed and wounded were brought in.’

He is probably best known for being one of the leading poets of the First World War and his works and character influenced many other writers and poets; notable Robert Graves and Wilfred Owen. His poetry both describes the horrors of war and satirises the jingoistic patriotism of the time. He would stage a lone protest to the continuation of the war in his ‘Soldier’s Declaration’ of 1917. This would culminate in his admission to a military psychiatric hospital in an attempt to silence his criticism.

Following the end of the First World War Sassoon would publish many books of prose including his Sherston Trilogy which was a fictionalised comic autobiography. On 11 November 1985 Sassoon was amongst 16 Great War poets to on a slate stone in Westminster Abbey's Poet's Corner. The inscription on the stone was written by fellow poet and friend Wilfred Owen, it reads: "My subject is War, and the pity of War. The Poetry is in the pity."

Hedd Wyn. Born Ellis Humphrey Evans in 1887 Evans wrote much of his poetry whilst working as a shepherd on his family's hill farm in Meirionnydd. It was here that he adopted the bardic name Hedd Wynn, which translates as Blessed Peace, from the way the sunlight penetrated the mist of the Meirionydd Valleys. He had composed his first poem, ‘Y Das Fawn’ (The Peat Stack) at age 11 and left school at age 14.

Hedd Wyn was a Christian pacifist and did not volunteer to enlist, feeling that he could never kill anyone. Although farming was a reserved occupation, in 1916 Hedd Wyn's family were required to send one of their sons to join the British Army. The 29-year-old Hedd Wyn enlisted to protect his younger brother Robert from conscription. In March 1917 Hedd Wyn was given seven weeks leave to help on his family farm, it was during this leave that he started to write his National Eisteddfod winning poem 'Yr Arwr' (The Hero). In June of the same year he joined the 15th Battalion The Royal Welsh Fusiliers at Fléchin, France. It was here that he completed 'Y Arwr' and signed it 'Fleur de Lis'. He submitted the poem via post to the Eisteddfod at the end of June.

Hedd Wyn was fatally wounded within the first few hours of The Battle of Ypres on 31 July 1917 after receiving shrapnel wounds to the stomach.

On 6 September 1917 the ceremony of Chairing the Bard took place at the National Eisteddfod. After the adjudicators announced the the poem 'Yr Arwr' had won, the trumpets were sounded for the author to identify themselves. After three such summons, Archdruid Dyfed solemnly declared that the winner had been killed in action six weeks earlier. The empty chair was draped in black and delivered to Hedd Wyn’s parents. The festival is now referred to as 'Eisteddfod y Gadair Ddu' (the Eisteddfod of the black Chair). Hedd Wyn is the only poet to have ever won the Chair at the Eisteddfod posthumously.

Notes:

1. The custom of wearing the white hackle (or plume) originated in 1702 when the 23rd of Foot was formed into a Regiment of Fusiliers. It was not considered suitable to wear the hackle with either the flat khaki service cap or with other khaki headwear which followed. With the introduction of the blue beret in 1950, the wearing of a white hackle was authorised and reintroduced.

2. The 23rd was one of the earliest regiments to be granted this appellation. The 1st mention of 23rd being called a Royal Regiment was in an order from St James's on 23 April 1713. All Royal Regiments were, and are distinguished, by royal-blue facings, but since 1935 regiments awarded the honour have been granted permission, at their request, to retain their original facings. The Royal Welsh continues the tradition of The Royal Welch Fusiliers by retaining royal-blue facings (i.e. cuffs and collars) on red tunics when full dress and with officer’s mess dress jackets.

3. In recognition of their service in Marlborough’s campaigns, Red Dragon, Rising Sun and the Prince of Wales’s Feathers, badges of Edward the Black Prince were awarded to the 23rd to be borne on their Colours. The White Horse of Hanover, was awarded to all regiments who saw service at the Battle of Dettingen. The motto NEC ASPERA TERRENT which appears under the White Horse translates to ‘Neither do difficulties deter’.

4. The 23rd marched with a goat at their head. It was apparently a custom of some long standing in the 23rd Foot, and in 1777 Major Robert Donkin, of the regiment, wrote in his Military Collections and Remarks that ‘The Royal Regiment of Welch Fusiliers has a privilegeous honor of passing in review preceded by a Goat with gilded horns, and adorned with ringlets of flowers’ and that ‘the corps values itself much on the ancientness of the custom’.

5. The Sphinx with EGYPT superscribed, commemorates the participation of the 23rd and 24th regiments in the Battle of Alexandria in July 1801 (authorised in 1802). The Sphinx on the Colour represents a Battle Honour, even though it does not have a separate Battle Honour scroll. Beneath the Sphinx are ‘the Laurels’, again awarded to both regiments after their participation in the Peninsular campaign (1808 - 14).

6. Queen Victoria gave the first Royal Goat to the 23rd Foot in 1844, selected from the Royal Herd.

7. In the days when soldiers had pigtails they were worn powdered and greased. In order to protect their jackets, soldiers enclosed the pigtails in what was known as a ‘queue bag’. In 1808, hair was ordered to be cut close to the neck and the queue was abolished. The officers of the Royal Welch Fusiliers decided to retain the ribbons with which the queue was tied, and, using an old slang term for a wig, they were known as the ‘Flash’. In 1834, when the 23rd Foot arrived in England, an inspecting general complained about the ‘superfluous decoration on the collar of the coat’ and the matter was referred to the King. King William IV was pleased to approve the Flash ‘as a peculiarity whereby to mark the dress of that distinguished regiment’. Until 1900 it was worn only by the officers, warrant officers and colour sergeants of the Royal Welch Fusiliers, but in that year, its use was extended to all ranks when in full dress. In 1924, it was approved for wear on ceremonial parades and when walking out.

8. Originating from their role of often leading the battalion on active service, the ceremonial pioneers of the Royal Welch Fusiliers have long held the privilege of marching behind the regimental goat at the head of the regiment on ceremonial parades. They wore white buckskin aprons and gauntlets and carry their traditional axes, shovels, pick axes and a mattock. The apron badge is the enlarged version of the regimental cap badge, similar to that worn on seal-skin caps. The sergeant traditionally wore a beard. In 1886, an inspecting general questioned their right to these distinctions of dress, and an appeal was made to the War Office which resulted in a letter, dated 27th January 1887, in which HRH the Duke of Cambridge, Field Marshal Commanding in Chief, was pleased to approve of white buckskin aprons and gauntlets being continued to be worn by the pioneers of the 2nd Battalion Royal Welsh Fusiliers, provided no extra expense is incurred against the public. The tradition of ceremonial pioneers is continued by The Royal Welsh today.

9. The Welsh Brigade badge was introduced in 1960 as a common badge to be worn by all three infantry regiments in the Welsh Brigade when the familiar regimental cap badges worn by Welsh soldiers since before the Great War were discontinued. However, in 1970, the Royal Welch Fusiliers reverted to their previous badge, a grenade flamed, proper, inscribed ‘Royal Welch Fusiliers’, within the crest of The Prince of Wales. The South Wales Borderers and Welch Regiment continued to wear the Brigade cap badge through their amalgamation into the Royal Regiment of Wales until a revised cap badge was introduced in 1975.

10. Thomas Howard, appointed Colonel 24th and led for 20 years. The Regiment acquired the nickname ‘Howard’s Greens’ from the colour of their facings in 1718.

11. Both 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 24th were engaged in the Ninth Frontier War in the Eastern Cape in 1877–8 and the subsequent war against the Zulus in 1879. On 22nd January 1879, five companies of the 1st Battalion and one company of the 2nd Battalion, in camp at Isandlwana, were attacked by a great mass of Zulus. Surrounded and greatly outnumbered, they fought desperately but were finally overwhelmed when the supply of ammunition failed. Twenty-one officers and 575 men of the regiment perished that day and only ten escaped with their lives. When it was evident that all was lost, Lieutenants Melvill and Coghill were ordered to save the Queen’s Colour of the 1st Battalion. They fought their way through to the Buffalo River, where both were killed. Some two weeks later, the Colour was recovered from the muddy waters of the Buffalo and restored to the battalion. The families of Lieutenant’s Melvill and Coghill later received their posthumous Victoria Crosses.

12. B Company 2nd/24th, under Lieutenant Gonville Bromhead was at Rorke’s Drift, some ten miles from the scene of the disaster at Isandlwana. That same afternoon, the victorious Zulus swept on and some 4,000 of them launched a series of fierce attacks on the tiny garrison at Rorke’s Drift. The attacks continued until the early hours of the following morning but were all beaten off. This action undoubtedly saved Natal from invasion. Of the 24th, Lieutenant Bromhead and six NCOs and men were awarded the Victoria Cross for their gallantry at Rorke’s Drift. No other regiment has been awarded seven Victoria Crosses for a single action.

13. On the return of the 1st Battalion from South Africa, Queen Victoria expressed a wish to see the Isandlwana Colour that had been recovered from Buffalo river, and with her own hands placed upon it a wreath of immortelles (dried flowers), directing that a silver replica should always be borne around the staff of the Queen’s Colour of both battalions, to commemorate the devotion of Lieutenants Melvill and Coghill and the noble defence of Rorke’s Drift by B Company of the 2nd Battalion. This Queen’s Colour was carried by the 1st Battalion until 1933 and now hangs in the Regimental Chapel in Brecon Cathedral. Beneath it, in an oaken case, is Queen Victoria’s wreath.

14. ‘Fogeys or Old Fogeys’, ‘Invalids or Royal Invalids’. This term was applied to all Regiments of Invalids, and succinctly describes the old and often decrepit men who helped fill their ranks.

15. ‘Wardour’s Horse’ This name derives from Col Tomkins Wardour, who was Colonel of the Regiment of Invalids from 1743-52. In 1779 there is mention of a note which states ‘if Invalids cannot march, they are with due discretion to ride on horseback or to be placed in carts’. This may have given birth to the nickname.

16. The 41st were known as one of the ‘Six Old Corps’, one of six regiments who instead of their bearing the Badge of their Colonel on the Colours, bore the Royal Badge that was granted to them. In the case of the 41st the ‘Garter with the Crown’.

17. The ‘Travelling Tinkers’ was most probably derived from the frequent postings/movements of the 41st.

18. The closest translation from the Welsh is ‘Better Death than Dishonour’ – however ‘Rather Death than Dishonour’ is more commonly used. It was adopted for the 41st Foot by Lieutenant Colonel Sir Edmund Keynton Williams in 1831, in which year he was successful in linking the 41st to Wales as The 41st or The Welch Regiment of Infantry. The form of the motto originally adopted by the 41st was Gwell Angau Neu Chwilydd and appeared as such on 1862 colours. It is interesting to note that the motto of the 2nd Battalion, The Monmouthshire Regiment, Gwel Angau na Gwarth (Better death than Disgrace), taken in use in 1862 by the Monmouthshire Rifle Volunteers, was strikingly similar. This motto continues in the Royal Welsh today.

19. The nickname ‘Ups and Downs’ refers to the number ’69’ and its obvious deduction from the two numbers.

20. This nickname was given to the 69th by Nelson after first serving on the third-rate HMS Agamemnon under Lord Nelson at the Battle of Genoa in March 1795, and then, after Nelson’s transfer into the third-rate HMS Captain in June 1796, with him at the Battle of Cape St Vincent in February 1797.

21. During the time the 69th were the South Lincolnshire Regiment, the regiment were known as the ‘Lincolnshire Poachers’, this nickname was shared with 10th (North Lincolnshire) Regiment.

22. Following a monsoon whilst posted at Toungtoo, Burma, the regimental parade ground was covered in two-foot-tall spear grass. The men of the battalion were turned out to clear the Parade Ground and were for a short time called the ‘Grass Pickers’.

23. The Battle Honour ‘St Vincent’ was applied for in 1880, but refused. In 1891 Army Order No 121 authorised the granting of The Battle Honour St Vincent, an Honour no other Regiment possesses.

24. On its formation in 1969, soldiers of The Royal Regiment of Wales continued to wear the Welsh Brigade design despite disapproval by many of this pattern as it did not conform to the traditional design for The Prince of Wales’s crest. Accordingly, in 1973, steps were taken to rectify this and several draft sketches were prepared and rejected, before one was finally accepted by the Regimental Committee and approved by the Colonel-in-Chief, the Prince of Wales. This design was submitted to the College of Arms and the Army Dress Committee. In the event, its approval was a formality and a revised design was introduced for the Royal Regiment of Wales in November 1975.

25. The Royal Welsh at this time consisted of the following: two regular battalions, the 1st Battalion The Royal Welsh (The Royal Welch Fusiliers) and the 2nd Battalion The Royal Welsh (The Royal Regiment of Wales), and a reserve battalion, The 3rd Battalion The Royal Welsh. On 1st April 2014, the 1st and 2nd Battalions The Royal Welsh merged to become The 1st Battalion The Royal Welsh, this was formally marked with a merger parade which was held in Tidworth on 3rd April 2014.

26. A decision was made to keep the 1975 design Royal Regiment of Wales cap badge with the hackle of The Royal Welch Fusiliers; however, The Army Historical Branch and The Army Dress Committee would not allow the wearing of a former regimental cap badge in a new regiment. A new regimental cap badge, which is based on the Royal Regiment of Wales cap badge with a scroll with the words ‘THE ROYAL WELSH’ was approved and worn by all ranks of The Royal Welsh in 2010.

THE ROYAL REGIMENT OF WALES (24th / 41st Foot)

A Short History of The Royal Regiment of Wales (24th /41st Foot), Regimental Committee, Cardiff, 1986.

THE ROYAL WELSH
The Royal Welsh is a regiment comprising of Army cadet and combined cadet forces, regular and reserve battalions and an extensive network of comrades branches within the United Kingdom. The regimental family has strong links to Wales and historic links to the Royal Navy and long-standing alliances with regiments throughout the Commonwealth and NATO.

THE ROYAL NAVY

It was the service of the 69th Regiment as marines with the Fleet which gave an early affiliation with the Royal Navy. On the 12th April 1782, the Regiment served as the marines in Hood’s division of Admiral Rodney’s fleet at the Battle of the Saints, which secured control of the Caribbean for the British. A detachment was present with Howe’s fleet at the battle known as the Glorious First of June, 1794. Following service at sea in the Mediterranean, detachments served with distinction with Sir John Jervis’s fleet at the Battle of St Vincent on 14 February 1797. The Welch Regiment was in its day unique in being the only British regiment to carry two naval battle honours on its Regimental Colour, namely a Naval Crown, subscribed ‘12 April 1782’, for the Battle of the Saints and the battle honour scroll 'St Vincent' to mark its services on the 14 February 1797. These battle honours and association with the Royal Navy continues with The Royal Welsh today.

Alliances. The Regiment has formed alliances by mutual consent and with the approval of the Ministry of Defence with the ship’s companies of:

HMS DRAGON. This is the fourth ship of the Type 45 or Daring-class air-defence destroyers built for the Royal Navy. She was launched in November 2008 and commissioned on 20th April 2012.

HMS TRENCHANT. This is a Trafalgar-class nuclear-powered fleet submarine.

ALLIED REGIMENTS

The aim of regimental alliances is to promote mutual understanding and friendship between all ranks of The Royal Welsh and allied Commonwealth and other countries’ regiments. All ranks of allied regiments are invited to visit Regimental Headquarters when visiting Britain and are also invited to visit the battalions of the Regiment wherever they may be at the time. Serving officers, warrant officers and sergeants of allied regiments are considered to be honorary members of the Regiments’ messes as appropriate. The following alliances have been approved:

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

LE ROYAL 22E RÉGIMENT

This alliance with the Royal Welch Fusiliers dates back to 1927 and was arranged by General Sir Charles Dobell, then Colonel of The Royal Welch Fusiliers, who had been born in Québec and who had a particular friendship with the then Colonel of The Royal 22e Régiment, General George Vanier. From 1934 until 1939, and again from 1961 to 1997, the two regiments exchanged officers, normally in the rank of captain.

THE ONTARIO REGIMENT OF CANADA

This alliance with The Welch Regiment dates from April 1928. The Ontario Regiment began life as the 34th Battalion of Canadian Infantry on 14th September 1866, but in 1920 after the First World War was renamed as The Ontario Regiment. On 15th November 1936, the unit was re-designated the Ontario (Tank) Regiment. The alliance, which was approved by HM King George V, was initiated by Lieutenant Colonel Frank Chappell, a Welshman by birth, who Commanded the 34th from 1925-1928. The Ontarios are now a militia (reserve) regiment, part of the Royal Canadian Armoured Corps.

AUSTRALIAN MILITARY FORCES

THE ROYAL NEW SOUTH WALES REGIMENT OF AUSTRALIA

This alliance with The Welch Regiment dates from 1934. The Royal New South Wales Regiment began life as the 45th Battalion, The St George Regiment, a militia regiment formed in 1912 from 1/1st and 1/2nd Australian Infantry Regiment and 1st St George’s English Rifle Regiment. During World War 1, the regiment was heavily involved in the fighting on the Western Front. In 1921 the 45th Regiment was reduced to one battalion, which became the St George’s Regiment in 1927. The regiment was linked to the 1/45th Australian Infantry Battalion but since militia units were not permitted to serve overseas the regiment was reformed as the 45th Battalion (Machine Gun), The St George Regiment. In 1959 it became the Royal New South Wales Regiment. In 1953 they adopted ‘Men of Harlech’ as their Regimental Quick March.

THE CITY OF SYDNEY’S OWN REGIMENT OF AUSTRALIA

This alliance began with the Royal Welch Fusiliers in 1927 with the 1st Battalion, Australian Military Forces. It soon became the 1st Battalion (East Sydney Regiment), then from 1930, the 1st/19th Battalion (City of Sydney Regiment), and in 1937 it adopted the name in the heading. The alliance may have survived the Second World War, but was no longer printed in the Army List after 1950. The regiment was disbanded, but in July 1960 it reappeared in the order of battle as a commando unit, and in 1965 became the 1st Battalion The Royal New South Wales Regiment.

PAKISTAN ARMY

4th BATTALION THE BALUCH REGIMENT OF PAKISTAN

This alliance originally with The Welch Regiment dates from April 1966 and was approved by HM Queen Elizabeth II. Raised as the 2nd Battalion 16th Native Infantry Regiment of The East India Company in Madura (in Southern India) on 1st January 1800, the Regiment went through various designations before becoming the 4th Battalion The Baluch Regiment, winning 25 battle honours in the process. The alliance fell into abeyance when Pakistan left The Commonwealth, however it has been re-instituted.

3rd BATTALION, THE FRONTIER FORCE REGIMENT

This alliance with the Royal Welch Fusiliers was approved by the Queen on 31st May 1996 following a suggestion by the Colonel of The Royal Welch Fusiliers, General Sir Hugh Stockwell. The alliance fell into abeyance when Pakistan left The Commonwealth, however it has been re-instituted.

RHODESIAN AFRICAN RIFLES

This alliance with The South Wales Borderers originates from The Malayan Emergency when 1st Battalion The South Wales Borderers fought alongside The Rhodesian African Rifles from 1955-1958. The Rhodesian African Rifles were disbanded when Rhodesia became Zimbabwe in 1980, and therefore this alliance has fallen into abeyance. The Regimental Colours of the 1st Battalion were smuggled out of the country and handed over to The Royal Regiment of Wales (24th /41st Foot) for safekeeping in a ceremony in the Regimental Museum in Brecon. Recently, these Colours and other artefacts are stored in the Rifles’ Officers’ Club in Davis Street London.

MALAYSIAN ARMED FORCES

4th BATTALION, THE ROYAL MALAY REGIMENT

This alliance with the Royal Welch Fusiliers began in 1957 and was arranged by the then Colonel of The Royal Welch Fusiliers, Lieutenant General Sir Hugh Stockwell, who served as Commander Land Forces in Malaya. General Sir Gerald Templer was also Colonel of The Malay Regiment.

SOUTH AFRICA

121 SOUTH AFRICAN INFANTRY BATTALION

This affiliation with The Royal Regiment of Wales (24th /41st Foot) originates from 26th January 1997 when a parade was held at Mtubatuba, South Africa. However, it could be said that the affiliation had its origins in the Zulu Wars when both the Zulus and the 24th revered each other as fine warriors. It is the first alliance between a British regiment and a modern unit of the South African Defence Forces. 121 South African Infantry Battalion was founded in KwaZulu Natal Province in 1981 to create an ethnic Zulu Battalion as an integral part of the Republic of South Africa’s defence forces.

THE PRETORIA REGIMENT

This alliance with the Royal Welch Fusiliers with what was then the 12th Infantry (Pretoria Regiment), began in June 1927 at the initiative of Major EO Skaife. The Regiment served alongside the 2nd Battalion The Royal Welch Fusiliers in Madagascar in 1942. The alliance was officially suspended in the 1960s but was reactivated following the end of apartheid in 1995.

THE ROYAL REGIMENT OF FUSILIERS

This is an informal but much cherished alliance which marks the service of The Royal Welch Fusiliers in the Fusilier Brigade with the 7th Royal Fusiliers during the Peninsular War, particularly at Albuera, and later during the Crimea War when during the final stages of the battle of Alma, the 7th Fusiliers’ Regimental Colour was carried between those of The Royal Welch Fusiliers. In the South African War, both regiments were in the Fusilier Brigade with the Scots and Irish Fusiliers. When the Royal Regiment of Fusiliers was formed, the alliance was confirmed in an exchange of letters in 1969 conferring honorary membership of each other’s messes to the officers, warrant officers and sergeants of both regiments.

THE UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS (USMC)

This unofficial alliance began in 1900 when the 2nd Battalion the Royal Welch Fusiliers served alongside the 1st Regiment the USMC during the Boxer Rebellion in China. In June 1930, the renowned Lieutenant Commander JP Sousa, former Director of Music USMC, presented the original score of his march, The Royal Welch Fusiliers, to the Regiment. This was the only march Sousa wrote for a British regiment. The USMC took part in the Tercentenary Pageant at Powis Castle in 1989.

THE ROYAL WELCH FUSILIERS IN AMERICA

This regiment which dates from the late 1960s, is part of a large organisation that exists to re-enact engagements of the Revolutionary War, or American War of Independence. To take part in a re-enactment, the original regiment must have been present at the battle. The Royal Welch Fusiliers, having taken part in almost – but not all – the major actions from Bunker Hill to Yorktown, was very popular. The RWFA was represented at the Tercentenary Pageant at Powis Castle and the reopening of the Regimental Museum in 2000. The RWFA regularly contributes to the regimental journal.

41st REGIMENT OF FOOT (MILITARY LIVING HISTORY GROUP) OF CANADA

They are based at Fort George, Niagara on the Lake, Ontario.

AFFILIATED UNIVERSITY OFFICER TRAINING CORPS (UOTC)

The Wales UOTC is the official affiliated UOTC to the Regiment. Where possible, and with the co-operation of the Army Personnel Centre, Glasgow, the Regiment should try to fill the key appointments of commanding officer, executive officer, adjutant and/or RSM.

AFFILIATED ARMY CADET FORCE (ACF) UNITS

Prior to 1st April 2009, the Army Cadet Force maintained six units in Wales, two covering North Wales and four covering Mid and South Wales. Following a restructure of the ACF in 2009, the six units were reduced to three with the merger of Clwyd ACF with Gwynedd ACF, Dyfed ACF with Glamorgan ACF and Gwent ACF with Powys ACF.

Clwyd & Gwynedd ACF: Formerly 4th (Cadet) Battalion and 6th (Cadet) Battalion The Royal Welch Fusiliers. Home to over 600 cadets and almost 170 adult volunteers in 34 detachments across the whole of North Wales, including a large Corps of Drums. This affiliation has carried on with The Royal Welsh with most of the cadets being cap badged Royal Welsh. Headquarters of Clwyd & Gwynedd ACF is based at Kinmel Camp, near Rhyl.

The Corps of Drums of Clwyd and Gwynedd ACF are badged Royal Welsh and wear ceremonial uniform whilst on parade, which includes: scarlet drummers tunics with green regimental facing crown and inch piping and drummers' wings. They wear the sealskin (black) cap with a white plume and regimental badge; blue trousers with a red stripe; and white belts and accoutrements with regimental buckles.

The Corps of Drums practises in four training locations: Deeside ARC, Kinmel Camp, Caernarfon ARC and Llandudno Detachment. The drummers come together at least five times a year to perform as a corps at various events from town carnivals to Armed Forces' Day and mess dinners. They play traditional military music but also have a contemporary repertoire for concert-style events.

Dyfed & Glamorgan ACF: With six companies, one squadron and 60 detachments, Dyfed and Glamorgan Army Cadet Force has the largest land mass area of any cadet force in the United Kingdom, with almost 1000 cadets and almost 220 adult volunteers in 62 detachments. Formerly affiliated to the Royal Regiment of Wales, this affiliation has carried on with The Royal Welsh with most of the cadets being cap-badge Royal Welsh. Headquarters Dyfed & Glamorgan ACF is at Litchard, Bridgend.

Gwent & Powys ACF: Formerly affiliated to the Royal Regiment of Wales. Home to over 750 cadets and 180 adult volunteers in 45 detachments, including the Band and Corps of Drums. The affiliation has carried on with The Royal Welsh with most of the cadets being cap-badge Royal Welsh. Headquarters Gwent & Powys ACF is based at the former Welsh Depot at Cwrt y Gollen, near Crickhowell.

AFFILIATED COMBINED CADET FORCE (CCF) DETACHMENTS

There are CCF contingents in over 400 secondary schools all over the UK, offering young people a broad range of challenging, exciting, adventurous and educational activities. The aim of the CCF is to enable the development of personal responsibility, leadership and self-discipline. Each CCF is an educational partnership between the school and the Ministry of Defence. The detachments are set out below:

- Christ College CCF Brecon
- Llandovery College CCF
- Llanwern High School CCF (Formerly Hartridge High School) Newport
- Monmouth School CCF
- St Brigid’s School CCF Denbigh

CIVIC FREEDOMS – THE ROYAL WELSH

The Regiment has been honoured with the Freedom of 21 boroughs in Wales and has the privilege of marching with Colours flying, drums beating, and bayonets fixed through the following places:

SECTION 6

INSTRUCTIONS FOR OFFICERS

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

All officers by their dress, bearing and demeanour on all occasions, both inside and outside barracks, will uphold the high standards of the Regiment and set an example to those serving under them. They are personally responsible for the clean and soldierly appearance of the men of the Regiment and for the state of their clothing, arms and equipment. The welfare and happiness of the men under their command is a matter of primary importance and will be the personal concern of every officer. A happy battalion is, more often than not, an efficient battalion. The scrupulously fair administration of discipline is not enough. Any intelligent man wants to know why he is doing things and to what purpose; it is the officer’s responsibility to tell him. It is out of parade hours that officers have the opportunity to associate themselves with the interests and activities of the men and women under their command. They will, therefore, not only identify themselves with the games and sports of all ranks, but where possible will take part in them. Participation of this kind will foster and encourage team and regimental spirit. Over and above this, every officer must be prepared to undertake some work for the good of the Regiment. Spontaneous and enthusiastic support is called for on the part of the younger generation to preserve and enhance the heritage that has been handed down.
CONDUCT IN THE OFFICERS’ MESS

The Officers’ Mess is an exclusive institution comprising all of the officers serving with each battalion of The Royal Welsh, continuing a tradition which dates back to 1689. It is much more than just a physical building in which officers live and dine. The Officers’ Mess represents the spirit, identity and sense of purpose that stems from the community of officers serving with the Battalion. The Officers’ Mess also provides a physical reminder of over 300 years of the history and tradition of The Royal Welsh and its antecedent regiments, through a collection of paintings, silver and other artefacts. Mess members are entrusted with maintaining this as a living history of the Regiment.

The Officers’ Mess is the front of house for the battalions, and therefore the Regiment as a whole, as well as being the home for all officers, whether they live-in or not. No one should be made to feel uncomfortable in the Mess.

The Officers’ Mess is a comparatively rank-free environment. Whilst junior members should respect more senior members, only the Commanding Officer should be addressed formally, as Colonel (not Sir). There is no drill within the Mess, but members should stand when the Commanding Officer enters the room. It is a privilege to live in the Mess and with this privilege come some responsibilities: all members, but especially living-in members, should respect the institution, its rules and its property. As officers, we are also expected to maintain the highest standards of behaviour. Mess members should simply behave according to the commission they received as gentlemen and lady officers.

Guests must be hosted immaculately – officers must not leave a guest to the Mess sitting or standing by himself in one of the public rooms. It is the duty of mess members to put guests at ease, to ensure their comfort and introduce them to others present. Mess members are encouraged to offer guests a drink and must make them feel comfortable and included throughout any social occasion. No one, guest or Mess member, should be forced to drink against their wishes.

The Senior Subaltern is responsible to the Adjutant for ensuring that the subaltern officers meet the standards required of them on all occasions. He is to ensure they play an active and constructive role in Mess activities, take a lively interest in the history and preservation of the many valuable items of property and silver which have been presented by and then well kept by preceding generations.

VISITORS

The hospitality offered to visitors is often the sign of a good, well run and welcoming Mess. If any visitor enters the Mess, an officer should immediately approach and offer hospitality. Other officers should stand up and introduce themselves. The courtesy of the home is expected, and junior officers are to assist in entertaining. Visitors calling on the Mess will be introduced to the senior officer present and offered the hospitality of the Mess by him. If the visitor has come to see an individual officer, steps will be taken to notify the officer immediately. Should a senior officer come to visit the Mess, the Commanding Officer and/or the Adjutant should be informed immediately.

THE VISITORS’ BOOK

Each Mess of the Regiment will have a Visitor’s Book, which should be displayed in the entrance to the Mess or in some other convenient place. All visitors should be asked to sign the Mess Visitors’ Book. The Book should also be signed by officers on first joining, on posting or retirement, and on re-joining the battalion.

GUESTS IN THE MESS

Guests are always to be made welcome in the Mess. They should be made to feel comfortable and at home. Guests are encouraged to use all the facilities in the Officers’ Mess but must be sponsored by a Mess member. Officers should remember that the bar, ante-room and dining room are not only public rooms for entertaining guests but also the home of living-in officers. Officers should be considerate and discreet in the manner in which they entertain guests in the Mess.
HONORARY MEMBERSHIP OF THE REGULAR BATTALION MESSES

The following are life honorary members of the Mess:

- The Colonel of The Regiment and all past Colonels of The Regiment and antecedent regiments.
- All serving and retired regular officers of the Regiment and antecedent regiments.
- Serving officers of allied ships and allied regiments.
- Regimentally-badged serving officers of the CCF and ACF.
- Serving officers of the Royal Regiment of Fusiliers.

The following may be invited to become temporary honorary members with the agreement of the Commanding Officer:

- Commanders of the formations in which battalions are, for the time being, serving.
- Such ladies and gentlemen as the President of the Mess Committee (PMC) may recommend to the Commanding Officer as deserving honorary membership.

Honorary members are entitled to use the Mess facilities and will receive Mess bills for the food and drink they consume. They will not pay Mess subscriptions, nor are they entitled to vote at Mess meetings.

THE STATEMENTS BOOK

In the 1st Battalion it is the custom for the more eccentric statements of Officers’ Mess members to be entered and duly witnessed in the Statements Book held in the Mess. This book dates to the 1930s and, apart from a brief gap during the Second World War, has been kept up to date by generations of Royal Welsh Officers. As such this artefact is not only a record of whimsical statements but is an important historical document and should be treated as such.

THE WAGERS BOOK

As with many Officers' Messes, it is the custom in the 1st Battalion for officers to settle objective disagreements with the use of a wagers book. All wagers must be entered and witnessed by an independent party and signed by at least two witnesses. The parameters of the wager must be clearly defined with an amount or object wagered and a time for completion set. It is considered extremely poor form for any Officer to not follow through on a wager once agreed.

ENTERTAINMENT IN THE MESS

The frequency and nature of the official entertainment to be given by a battalion of the Regiment will be decided by the Commanding Officer, consistent with the general level of entertainment wherever the Regiment may be stationed.

Regular Battalion. In the 1st Battalion it is customary to hold the following formal functions. The conduct of regimental dinner nights is detailed in Standard Operating Instructions for each function, maintained by the PMC.

- Rorke’s Drift Dinner Night. The Rorke's Drift Dinner Night is a regimental dinner night and is to take place on the Friday evening closest to the 22nd of January. It is an opportunity to invite spouses and partners to a formal dinner in the Officers’ Mess.

- St David’s Day Dinner Night. The St David's Day Dinner Night is a regimental dinner night and is to take place on an evening as close to the 1st March as the Commanding Officer feels convenient. It is the Mess’s premier event, as such it is an excellent opportunity to show the battalion at its best. It is therefore an excellent opportunity to invite guests who have helped or can help the battalion in future.

- The Alma Dinner Night. The Alma Dinner Night is a regimental dinner night, to be held as close to the 20th of September as possible. The dinner is attended by members of the Officers' and Warrant Officers' and Sergeants' Messes; this joint attendance recognises the pivotal role played in the battle by the non-commissioned officers of the 23rd after most of their officers had been killed. As such, it is not normally an occasion for the invitation of external guests.

- Summer Ball. The Summer ball is normally the largest function organised by the Officers’ Mess and requires detailed planning. This is an opportunity to invite friends and family to a relatively informal party in the Officers’ Mess. There is no set format, rather the mess committee should think creatively about a theme for the evening.

- Christmas Ball. The Christmas ball is by tradition a black-tie dinner, to which spouses and partners are invited. There is no set format for this dinner, but it is customary for the entertainment to include the appearance of ‘Santa Claus’ to present humorous gifts to mess members, aided by a number of ‘elves’.

Reserve Battalion. In the 3rd Battalion, whenever possible, it is customary to hold a St David’s Day Dinner annually in February / March and a regimental dinner at Annual Camp.

Dining In and Out of Officers

The Colonel of the Regiment, if not previously a regimental officer, will be formally dined in at the first opportunity after assuming his appointment, and will in any case be dined out on a suitable occasion close to the end of his appointment. Likewise, the commanding officer of a battalion of the Regiment will be dined out by his officers upon relinquishment of command.

SILVER AND PROPERTY

The Regiment possesses a wealth of valuable silver, medals, pictures and other property, most of which is to be found either with the battalion messes or in the regimental collections. Some of the more interesting items are described at Annexes A and B. As regards items with battalions, officers should realise that during their active service they are the custodians of this regimental property and are collectively responsible for passing it on to succeeding generations in good condition. See also Part 13 – Chattels. Every officer should, early in his career, acquaint himself with the property held in the battalion in which he is serving.

Presentations to the Mess. It is a custom in the Regiment that when a regular officer leaves the Mess on permanent transfer, relinquishment of command, or retirement, he makes a voluntary presentation to the Mess as a mark of affection and pride in the Regiment. Such presentations are entirely optional. The form of presentation will normally be decided in consultation with the PMC, and as far as possible should be dictated by the requirements of the Mess as well as the personal inclination of the donor. There is no objection to a subscription being made toward a fund for a particular purpose, e.g. the purchase of a picture or piece of silver. When this is done the names of all officers who have subscribed to the item will be inscribed upon it in a suitable and prominent place.

RED DRAGON CUP 1904 – 1939

This magnificent cup was purchased by the Officers' Mess 1st Battalion The Royal Welch Fusiliers from the Mess Plate subscriptions which had accumulated during the South African War 1899-1902. It was to be competed for annually by the officers in a point to point race of some three or four miles of good hunting country, the horses to be owned and ridden by officers of the regiment. Hallmarked LONDON 1903, this elaborately ornamental cup has four large and four small flexible festoons attached and two dragons and two goat heads oppose each other on the brim. It is 24” x 15” high and stands on a plinth 42” long x 17½” wide. It has four feet and is supported at each end by a sphinx. Above each sphinx is a horse facing outwards. Its Weight is approx – Cup 437 oz, Base 627 oz = Total 1064 oz.

The engraving on the centre panel of the plinth:

“The Red Dragon Cup”
“Cymru am Byth”
On the sides of the plinth below the horses are the winners of the cup 1904 – 1939

INDIA CENTRE PIECE

The 1st Battalion The Royal Welch Fusiliers served in India from 1857 to 1869. They returned to UK disembarking at Portsmouth and were stationed at Devonport from 9 November 1869 to 28 October 1870. It seems that the officers decided that a memorial to their brother officers who lost their lives in India during the Mutiny and afterwards would be appropriate, and that a similar memorial should be provided for those officers who died during the war in the Crimea 1854 – 1856. The entry in Officers Mess Records (see Regimental Records Vol 1 page 308) that “when at Raglan Barracks, Devonport in November 1869, it was decided to spend about £200 in the purchase of two pieces of plate, one to commemorate the officers who fell in the Crimea, and the other to those who fell in India”. The two memorials, known in the Regiment as “The Obelisks” were on the dinner table for the first time on St David's Day 1870 at Raglan Barracks, Devonport.

Hallmarked LONDON 1870 and made by Garrards, it consists of a hexagonal column mounted on a slightly tapered circular base around the foot of which there is a dragon, a horse and a winged sphinx, all equidistant from each other. Two identical pairs of the Queen's and Regimental Colours with the pikes crossed and held by a laurel wreath with the Prince of Wales’s Plumes, coronet and scroll with motto below are mounted against the column. The crossing of the pikes shows the Regimental Colour on the left and the Queen’s Colour on the right. The overall height of the piece is 23½” and it weighs 123 oz.

Engraved on the base – IN MEMORIAM. INDIA 1857 – 1869

CRIMEA CENTREPIECE

The 1st Battalion The Royal Welch Fusiliers served in the Crimean War, departing England on 4 April 1854 and returning on 21 July 1856. Some twenty officers lost their lives, eleven being killed in action, five died of wounds and four died of disease. In November 1869, the officers decided to spend £200 on the purchase of two pieces of plate, one to commemorate the officers who fell in the Crimea and the other to those who fell in India between 1857 and 1869. The two memorials, known in the Regiment as “The Obelisks” were on the dinner table for the first time on St David’s Day 1870 at Raglan Barracks, Devonport.

Hallmarked LONDON 1870 and made by Garrards, it consists of a triangular column with truncated corners mounted on a similarly shaped and slightly tapering base at the foot of which there is a dragon, a horse and a winged sphinx, each mounted at one of the truncated corners. Two identical pairs of the Queen’s and Regimental Colours with the pikes crossed and held by a laurel wreath with the Prince of Wales’s plumes, coronet and scroll with motto below are mounted against the column. The crossing of the pikes shows the Regimental Colour on the left and the Queen’s Colour on the right. The overall height of the piece is 23½”. Length of sides base 7¼” and 2½”. It weighs 125 oz.

Engraved on base: “IN MEMORIAM – CRIMEA 1854 -1856”

MARLBOROUGH

Marlborough is the centrepiece of the South Wales Borderers (24th Regiment) and was held by the 1st Battalion The Royal Regiment of Wales (24th/41st Foot). The centrepiece, made by Mappin and Webb of London, in sterling silver, commemorates the bicentenary of the raising of 24th Foot in 1889. The Centrepiece depicts several scenes, period dress and regimental insignia of the 24th Regiment.
For description purposes, the centrepiece can be divided into three distinct areas: the base, centre stand and the top. The base is supported by scrolled legs each depicting a battle honour awarded to the 24th Regiment. A silver Sphinx supports the base in the centre and it commemorates the regiment’s involvement in the Egyptian campaign and its successful attack on Alexandria in 1801. Even today the Regimental Colours of The Royal Welsh bears a ‘Sphinx superscribed Egypt’ — a regimental battle honour — in recognition of the 24th’s success. The base also has four battle scenes in relief, representing four separate battles. These are the Battle of Alexandria (July 1801), the Battle for the Cape of Good Hope (1806), the Battle of Talavera (27/28 July 1809) during the Peninsular campaign, and finally the noble Defence of Rorke’s Drift (22/23 January 1879).

The central stand is oblong in shape and depicts two major battle honours on its larger sides. The Battle of Blenheim (13th August 170 — the Regiment’s oldest battle honour, and first of four famous battles won by the Duke of Marlborough. On the other side, the courageous efforts of the 24th are immortalised in silver with the scene from the Battle of Chillianwallah (13th January 1849) during the Second Sikh war. At each corner is a statuette representing uniforms worn by soldiers of the 24th Regiment at different periods: 1689, the year in which the Regiment was raised; 1792, prior to the Napoleonic Wars; from 1826 in Canada; and from 1889, the bicentenary year. The two winged angels on the centrepiece, sitting on circular pedestal portray ‘Calling for Victory’ and ‘Receiving Victory’; the Regimental Colours are draped behind the angels for dramatic effect and one can identify the ‘Wreath of Immortelles’ on the Queen’s Colour. Queen Victoria bestowed this honour, unique to the 24th Foot, in recognition of the regiment’s heroic efforts in the Zulu War of 1879. On the top of the centrepiece is a fine equestrian statue of John Churchill, 1st Duke of Marlborough, who was Colonel of the 24th Regiment between 1702-1704. He was a military leader second only in the 18th century to Frederick the Great of Prussia, and the most successful of all the allied commanders in the War of the Spanish Succession. Son of an impoverished royalist squire from Devon, he was first commissioned in the Foot Guards in 1667. He seems always to have been embroiled in the schemes of aristocracy. It was during a period serving at court that he was attracted to Sarah Jennings, a lady-in-waiting and childhood friend of Princess Anne (later Queen Anne). John Churchill and Sarah Jennings were married in 1678. In 1683, he became Colonel, 1st Royal Dragoons. Two years later he was promoted Major General and crushed the Duke of Monmouth at the Battle of Sedgemoor. In 1702 on the accession of Queen Anne, he was promoted captain-general and sent to Holland to command the combined Dutch and British Forces. He is best remembered for four famous battles all of which are honours carried by The Royal Welsh — BLENHEIM (1704), RAMILLIES (1706), OUDENARDE (1708) and MALPLAQUET (1709). The table upon which the centrepiece sits was commissioned by the officers of the 1st Battalion The Royal Regiment of Wales (24th/41st Foot) to commemorate the Tercentenary in 1899.

INKERMAN

Inkerman is the centrepiece of The Welch Regiment (formerly 41st and 69th Foot) held by the 1st Battalion, The Royal Welsh. It was commissioned in 1895 and made from the remnants of the regimental silver destroyed in the fire of that year in the Officers’ Mess at Pembroke Dock. Having saved the Colours, the Crimean Colour (which now hangs in Llandaff Cathedral), the Crimean Drums and a couple of pieces of silver, the roof collapsed which prevented any further rescue. The next morning a fatigue party collected enough molten silver to fill ‘13 large buckets and one bath’, according to Captain Lomax. The hallmark is from Hunt and Roskell Ltd of London and is dated 1897. The ‘Inkerman’ centrepiece commemorates the battle honours and emblems of both the 41st and 69th Regiments of Foot.

Around the base the battle honours and emblems of the 41st and 69th Foot are displayed. A dragon stands at each corner symbolising the collar badges of the Welch Regiment. In the centre, on either side, stands a goat, the mascot of the regiment since (probably) the Crimean War. Arranged around the base are four silver figures of soldiers are depicting: a private from 1719 (raising of 41st Foot), a grenadier from 1769, a sergeant from 1815 (Waterloo) and a private from 1854 (Crimean campaign period).

The central column is decorated with battle scenes in relief of the actions of the 41st at Fort Detroit (1812), at Rangoon (1824), Hykulzee (1842) and Sandbag Battery (the central part of the Battle of Inkerman, 5 November 1854).

The top of the centrepiece consists of a dramatic scene from the Battle of Inkerman. During the battle the Colour Party, consisting of Lieutenant Armar Lowry carrying the Queen’s Colour and Lieutenant John Sterling carrying the Regimental Colour, found themselves a little in front of Sandbag Battery, the central point of much of the action that day. During the course of the battle Lieutenant Stirling was shot in the head and with him fell the Regimental Colour. The Colour might have been lost at this point had it not been for the brave action of Sergeant Daniel Ford who used bayonet and rifle butt to drive back the Russians. They were then sent to the rear. The 41st Foot fought gallantly during the battle but suffered heavy losses. During the battle Captain Hugh Rowlands was awarded the Victoria Cross for saving the Commanding Officer of the 47th Foot from capture, the first Welshman to win this award. (It should be noted that he was not the first member of the regiment to be awarded the VC. That accolade went to Sergeant Luke O’Connor (an Irishman) and Captain Edward Bell (an Englishman) of 23rd Foot who were awarded their VCs at the Battle of Alma on 20 Sep 54). The Commanding Officer of the 41st Foot, Colonel George Carpenter, also died during the Battle of Inkerman whilst cheering on his men in front of a gun battery. The 41st Foot lost a total of 1,016 officers and men, killed, died of disease or wounded in the two years of the Crimean campaign.

RUFUS

Rufus is a sterling silver centerpiece that has no military connection with the Regiment. The piece depicts the death of King William II, third son of William the Conqueror, who reigned from 1087 to 1100. He was often called William Rufus; some chroniclers said this was because he had red hair, others believed it was because he would go very red when angry. The centerpiece captures the action at a point after dinner on 2 August 1100 when the King was shot by an arrow during a stag hunt in the New Forest in Hampshire. Sir Walter Tyrrell allegedly fired the arrow and fearing for his life then fled to France. It has become one of the great debates of medieval history as to whether it was a genuine hunting accident or whether it was regicide. It is interesting to note however that Rufus’s younger brother who was present at the hunt had himself crowned as King Henry I within three days. Rufus’s bad luck did not end with his death, however. His body was taken to Winchester where he was laid to rest in the cathedral under the tower. Seven years later the tower collapsed, and his body was left under the rubble when the tower was rebuilt.

The ‘Rufus’ centerpiece has had an interesting journey into the Officers’ Mess of the Regiment. Queen Victoria commissioned several renowned silversmiths to produce a piece of silver to commemorate the inauguration of the ‘Oaks’ classic horse race (probably in 1877, since the hallmark is from that year). Only one piece was selected as the trophy for presentation to the winner of the ‘Oaks’ and the remainder were auctioned at Sotheby’s in 1879. ‘Rufus’ was created by Garrards and submitted but in the event was not chosen.

In the same year the auction took place, the 2nd Battalion 24th Regiment returned from a 13-year overseas tour of duty in Malta, Gibraltar and South Africa. On arrival in Great Britain, several officers decided to visit London and celebrate their homecoming. During the celebrations some of the officers, who by now were quite drunk, visited Sotheby’s auction rooms and attended the auction of the silver pieces that had failed to be selected for the ‘Oaks’. The following morning those officers were informed that not only had they bid for certain lots but they had outbid all others for the purchase of Rufus. Unable to meet the cost of the centerpiece, they approached their Commanding Officer and explained their predicament. To prevent any disgrace for either the officers concerned or the Regiment, the Commanding Officer ordered all officers to contribute to the cost and Rufus was purchased.

Of those who contributed were Captain ES Browne, who had been awarded a VC during the Zulu War (and commanded 2 SWB in 1894), Captain U de R Roche, who commanded 2 SWB during the Boer War, and Captain HG Mainwaring, who took command of 1 SWB in 1896 in Gibraltar (and shot the black bear which is preserved in the Officers’ Mess in Brecon). Rufus now sits proudly in the Officers’ Mess, 1st Battalion The Royal Welsh as one of the main silver displays.

CHILLIANWALLAH

The ‘Chillianwallah’ centrepiece is made of sterling silver and was presented to the Officers’ Mess of the 1st Battalion South Wales Borderers in 1896 by Lieutenant Colonel George Banister. An Irishman, he was commissioned into the 24th Foot in 1868 and was a great friend of Major Gonville Bromhead VC. He served in South Africa 1877-1879, including the Zulu campaign with H Company 2/24th. This piece was his retirement gift to the 2nd Battalion after 24 years’ service.
The central column is a scale replica of the monument erected in the grounds of Royal Hospital Chelsea in 1853. The monument was erected to commemorate the Battle of Chillianwallah, which took place during the 2nd Sikh War on 13th January 1849. The cannons represent the Sikh batteries captured by the 24th, in an action which saved the British forces from heavy casualties. During the battle the Regiment held the isolated position until, after repeated attacks, they were forced to give way, during which the Queen’s Colour was lost but the Regimental Colour was saved by Private Richard Perry. After the battle, the 24th Foot who had lost nearly half its strength (525 men were wounded or killed out of a strength on the day of 1,096), were praised by Brigadier Sir Cohn Campbell, commanding the 3rd Division, saying that ‘It was impossible for any troops to have surpassed the gallantry display by this regiment which broke the enemy’s line single-handed and took a large number of guns to their front.’ On the monument are engraved the names of those of the regiment who died during the battle. The actual monument was paid for by the officers of the 24th Foot at a cost of £600 (this would represent about £1,118,000 in 2019). The Chillianwallah column is the only memorial dedicated to a specific regiment in the grounds of the Royal Hospital.

It is fitting that this centrepiece is usually placed on the Officers’ Dining Table as the 13 officers killed in the battle were laid on the table of the Officers’ Mess of the 24th before being buried. They included the Commanding Officer, Lieutenant Colonel Robert Brookes, and all the company commanders. Furthermore, two of those who died were Colonel John Pennycuick who, late of the 24th Foot, was commanding the 5th Brigade of which the 24th were a part, and his 17-year-old son Ensign Alexander Pennycuick. On hearing that his father had been shot, Ensign Pennycuick, who had only recently completed his training at Sandhurst and had risen from his sick bed for the battle, dashed forward to his father’s aid but was killed immediately. They were found lying side by side. With a further 10 officers being wounded there were only nine officers of the 24th Foot left fully fit, however the battalion still played a part in the rest of the campaign. This included serving at the Battle of Punjaub on 21st February 1849, which, unlike Chillianwallah, was not a ‘pyrrhic’ victory, because Shere Singh, the Sikh general, surrendered shortly afterwards.

THE McMAMON STATUETTE – the Waterloo Sergeant

It was fitting that a sergeant of the 23rd RWF should represent the sergeants whose responsibility it was to preserve the form of the British Squares at Waterloo. This model, hallmarked London 1909 ED, is of the statue of the sergeant of the 23rd RWF at Waterloo sculpted by Boehm as part of the memorial to the Duke of Wellington at Hyde Park Corner. The Sergeant stands at the near side near corner of the plinth of the memorial.

The sculptor, Sir Joseph Edgar Boehm, Bart, was born in Vienna on 4 July 1834. He completed the colossal statue of Queen Victoria in marble for Windsor Castle in 1869 and then the monument to the Duke of Kent in St George’s Chapel. He was made ARA in 1878, sculptor in ordinary to Queen Victoria in 1881 and RA in 1882. He executed the equestrian status of the Duke of Wellington at Hyde Park Corner and designed the coinage for the Jubilee of Queen Victoria in 1887. He died suddenly in his studio at South Kensington on 12 December 1890. Messrs Elkington produced a number of models of our Waterloo Sergeant in bronze and silver. Sir Horace McMahon acquired a silver model which he presented to the officers 2 RWF on leaving the Regiment. He also had a model gilded which he retained for himself. This latter is now in possession of the Regimental Museum. Sir Horace Westrop McMahon, 5th Bart DSO CBE was born on 28 October 1863, the second son of General Sir Thomas McMahon, 3rd Bart CB by his wife Frances Mary, daughter of John Holford Esq. He succeeded his elder brother, Sir Aubrey Hope McMahon, 4th Bart on 8 April 1893. As he had served in the Militia he was commissioned lieutenant in the Royal Warwickshire Regiment on 25 November 1885 but transferred to the Royal Welch Fusiliers on 16 December the same year and served in South Africa and during the First World War. He died on 9 July 1932.

The Waterloo Sergeant is mounted on a silver plinth 6¼” square x 6” high. The overall height of the plinth and statuette is therefore 25½”. The model is 17½” high or 19½” high inclusive of the Sergeant’s expontoon or half pike.

The engraving on the back of the plinth.

SECTION 7
INSTRUCTIONS FOR WARRANT AND NONCOMMISSIONED OFFICERS AND FUSILIERS

WARRANT OFFICERS

Non-commissioned officers and soldiers, when addressing a Warrant Officer, are to show their respect by calling him ‘Sir’ and by standing at attention.

Warrant Officers Class I have the privilege of wearing officers’ pattern Service Dress and Barrack Dress.

THE REGIMENTAL SERGEANT MAJOR (RSM)

The RSM is the right-hand man of the Commanding Officer (CO). His key role is to keep the CO well informed from a soldier’s perspective on all decisions made. The RSM is the senior soldier within the regiment and therefore the voice of soldiers. He closely monitors the lived experience of the soldiers and feeds any relevant information to the CO. This includes beneficial or prejudicial interests to the Battalion. He provides confidential, honest advice to the CO.

The RSM is the example setter to soldiers. He will be immaculately dressed, and his behavioural conduct will be of the highest standard both inside and outside the barracks. He will protect the reputation of the Battalion by enforcing standards which he will lead with by example. He will continuously observe the character and conduct of WOs, SNCOs, JNCOs and Fusiliers to maintain standards.

The RSM runs the WOs’ & SNCO plot alongside the RCMO. This allows him to professional develop and qualify soldiers for future posts and to provide honest advice and guidance. He is the presiding member of both WOs’ & Sgts’ Mess and the Cpls Mess.

The RSM works closely with the Adjutant with all discipline matters, he runs the guards and duties list for the Battalion. On operations he is the owner and enforcer of battlefield discipline and security.

THE COMPANY SERGEANT MAJOR (CSM)

The CSM is to the Officer Commanding (OC / Company Commander) as the RSM is to the CO. He will keep him well informed, honest and provide confidential advice on all matters. He will also monitor the lived experience of the soldiers and feed his findings back into the OC ensuring the RSM is aware.

The CSM is the example setter of the company. He will be immaculately dressed, and his behavioural conduct will be of the highest standard both inside and outside the barracks. He will protect the reputation of the Battalion by enforcing standards which he will lead with by example. He will continuously observe the character and conduct of SNCOs, JNCOs and Fusiliers within the company to ensure standards are maintained. The CSM is the disciplinarian for the company. His further roles are informing soldiers what duties they are on and when, write company detail on behalf of the OC and have detailed input into the training programme. He has a key part in both the professional development and military development of all soldiers.

SENIOR NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS (SNCO)

Colour Sergeants (CSgt) and Sergeants (Sgt) fall under the bracket of SNCO. The CSgt is the higher in rank and is therefore normally employed in a logistical role normally as the Company Quarter Master Sergeant Tech / Maint (CQMS T/M). Both roles are key in supporting any exercise or operation a company finds itself participating in. CSgts provide sustainment for soldiers and equipment alike. CSgts historically had the greatest honour of protecting both The Queens Colour and the Regimental Colours in battle. This is what made the rank ‘colour’ sergeant.

Sergeants are advisors and enablers to the platoon commanders both in camp and deployed. They constantly strive to raise the standards of all soldiers below them raising military skills and assist in the professional development. They enforce the direction from the CSM whilst leading by example. Sergeants are role models and are the people who interact with our soldiers daily.

JUNIOR NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS (JNCO)

JNCOs are made up from Corporals (Cpl) and Lance Corporals (LCpl). Their roles are absolute key to the success of the Battalion. They are the section commanders and section second in commands. They follow direction to a tee and command Fusiliers. They are the first line of discipline ensuring solders are up to the required standards. To become a LCpl an individual would have to be an exceptional Fusilier showing he is well behaved, can follow orders, is always turned out well and has the right character to attend a promotional course.

FUSILIERS AND DRUMMERS

A good Fusilier follows direction well. He is respectful to his superiors and works well alongside his comrades. Fusiliers obey orders and ultimately deliver results under the supervision of JNCOs. Fusiliers who are employed within the Corps of Drums are given the title Drummer or Dmr for short instead of Fusilier.

THE WARRANT OFFICERS’ AND SERGEANTS’ MESS

A Warrant Officers’ and Sergeants’ Mess will be maintained in each Battalion of the Regiment in accordance with Queen’s Regulations. The Mess will be under the control of the RSM and will additionally be supervised by a Field Officer appointed by the Commanding Officer. The authority of the RSM or in his absence from station that of the next senior Warrant Officer, is paramount in the Sergeants’ Mess. The Warrant Officers’ and Sergeants’ Mess is to produce Mess Rules which are to be agreed at a Mess Meeting. The Mess Rules are to follow the provisions of this Section of the Handbook in both letter and spirit. They will in addition detail the duties and responsibilities of the Mess Committee members and of the Mess staff. The efficient execution of these duties and responsibilities underpins many of the provisions set out above and elsewhere in this Handbook. All Warrant Officers and Sergeants are Members of the Mess and are to be in possession of copies of the Mess Rules and this Handbook, with which they are to acquaint themselves. Mess members are to purchase Mess Dress at the earliest opportunity. A well-conducted and vibrant Warrant Officers’ and Sergeants’ Mess is invariably the back-bone of a happy and effective Battalion. It is the duty of all Mess members to ensure that high standards and an appropriate tone are maintained. All visitors to the Mess are welcomed with our traditional courtesy and hospitality.

Joining and Leaving the Mess. All members on first entering the Warrant Officers’ and Sergeants’ Mess will be formally introduced by the President. They will be dined in as guests of the Mess at the earliest suitable occasion. Members leaving the Mess on retirement will be formally dined out, as will the RSM on relinquishing his appointment and the Quartermaster on retirement. It is also customary for the Commanding Officer to be dined out.

‘Ringing the Bell’. It is customary for Mess members to celebrate their promotions by treating all present to drinks with a price cap of £50. This is announced by the ringing of a bell which will always be met with a loud cheer. When several members of the Mess are promoted members may be required to ‘ring the bell’ on other occasions at the RSM’s discretion. Treating is otherwise strongly discouraged.

Mess Property

The Warrant Officers’ and Sergeants’ Mess are custodians of a wealth of valuable silver, medals, pictures and other property, which form a vital part of our Regimental heritage. Some of the more interesting items are described at Annex A, and Mess members should acquaint themselves with these and other items in their Mess. During their active service, they are the custodians of this Regimental property and are collectively responsible for passing it on to succeeding generations in good condition.
REGIMENTAL HISTORY

All Warrant Officers and Senior Non-Commissioned Officers should become acquainted with the history of the Regiment in greater detail than it is possible to give in this publication. To assist in this, a bibliography is given at Annex D to Part 4. They should also be aware of the continuing need to collect papers, information relating to current activities and pass them to Regimental Headquarters for the Regimental Archives as a basis for future Regimental histories and displays.

SALUTING

The exchange of salutes is a sign of mutual recognition and respect between all ranks and is initiated by the junior rank. Nothing shows the discipline and alertness of a Regiment more than smart saluting. Soldiers will salute officers of all corps whom they know to be officers, whether they are dressed in uniform or not.

CHRISTMAS CELEBRATIONS

On Christmas Day, or the nearest available day before the holiday if the battalion is on leave, the following customs should whenever possible be observed:

Gunfire. At reveille, the officers, warrant officers and senior NCOs visit their company lines and serve their junior ranks in bed with tea or coffee laced with rum.

Soldiers’ Christmas Lunch. For this occasion, the regimental restaurant is decorated and the corporals and below seated at company tables are served with a Christmas meal by the officers, warrant officers and senior NCOs of the battalion. Service Dress/No.2 Dress is normally worn. At the conclusion of the meal it is customary for the commanding officer to make a short speech and for the senior fusilier to reply, toasting the Regiment.

Chelsea Pensioners. When a battalion of the Regiment is in the UK at Christmas it is customary to invite the Regiment’s Chelsea In-Pensioners to join in the celebrations, but they will in any case be visited at Chelsea Hospital by an officer from RHQ.

Mess Hospitality. After the Soldiers’ Lunch, the officers will entertain the sergeants to drinks in their mess, or the other way around on alternate years.

SECTION 9

REGIMENTAL DAYS AND CELEBRATIONS

INTRODUCTION

The long and glorious histories of all our predecessor regiments are full of remarkable feats of arms and outstanding examples of courage, endurance and devotion. The occasions of some of these have traditionally been celebrated as regimental days, and such days and the customs associated with them remain both an inspiration and an important part of the fabric of regimental life. The purpose of this section is to record the customs and procedures appropriate to each of these days.

Regimental Days. The Royal Welsh celebrates three principal regimental days: The following days were sanctioned by the Regimental Heritage Committee:

- Rorke’s Drift Day (22 January).
- St David’s Day (1 March).
- Alma Day (20 September).

Other dates that ‘may’ be used and utilised for set functions if required are:
• Waterloo Day (18 June)
• Minden Day (1 August)
• Gheluvelt Day (31 October)

GENERAL PRINCIPLES

The three regimental days are to be the focus for major celebrations across the Regiment, while those days noted as regimental celebrations may be observed with traditional ceremonies but in a rather lower key at the discretion of commanding officers. Appropriate ceremonies and other observances for each day are set out below. The three principal regimental days should be celebrated with full ceremony whenever circumstances permit and should otherwise be observed in abbreviated form. The aim should be to achieve a balance between these principal days. It is the duty of the commanding officer for the time being to ensure the procedures for each day, as laid down in this section, are carried out. If circumstances prevent the full ceremonial being observed on these days, he will adapt the procedures laid down in the manner most fitting to the occasion in the prevailing circumstances.

Greetings. It is customary on particular regimental days for greetings to be exchanged.

• 22 January - Rorke's Drift Greeting – Battalions, Colonel of the Regiment, Scottish, Welsh and Irish Division, Headquarters 160th Brigade, affiliated Army Cadet Force battalions and comrades’ branches.
• 1 March - St David’s Day Greeting – HM The Queen, battalions, Colonel of the Regiment, allied regiments, affiliated Army cadet battalions and comrades’ branches.
• 5 March – Barrosa Day Greeting – The Royal Irish Regiment
• 17 March – St Patrick’s Day – Royal Irish Regiment and Scottish, Welsh and Irish Division.
• 21 April – Loyal birthday greetings to HM The Queen.
• 6 June – D Day Greeting – Mercian Regiment and Scottish, Welsh and Irish Division.
• 31 October – Gheluvelt Greeting - Battalions, Colonel of the Regiment, Scottish, Welsh and Irish Division, affiliated Army Cadet Force battalions and comrades’ branches.
• 1 November – Loyal Greeting to HM The Queen for Officers’ Society Dinner.

Official Guests. There is no obligation to invite any official guests outside the Regiment either to the parade on a regimental day or to any entertainment that may be held in the messes. The commanding officer may, however, at his discretion, invite selected officers or others who have been closely connected with the battalion in its station at the time. Similarly, if the Colonel of the Regiment is unable to be present, the commanding officer may invite a senior officer, for example, the battalion’s brigade commander, to take the salute at a parade.

Special Orders of the Day. On both regimental days and days of regimental celebration the routine orders of all units of the Regiment are headed by a Special Order of the Day, using the citations in this section.

Orders of the Day

St David’s Day

Special Order of the Day

On this day, 1 March, we celebrate St David, Patron Saint of Wales. Saint David (Welsh: Dewi Sant) was born in Caerfai, South West Wales into an aristocratic family. He was reportedly a scion of the royal house of Ceredigion and founded a Celtic monastic community at Glyn Rhosyn (The Vale of Roses) on the western headland of Pembrokeshire at the spot where St David's Cathedral stands today.

David’s fame as a teacher and his asceticism spread among Celtic Christians, and he helped found about 12 monasteries. His foundation at Glyn Rhosyn became an important Christian shrine, and the most important centre in Wales. The date of Saint David’s death is believed to be 1 March 589. His final words to the community of monks were: “Brothers be ye constant. The yoke which with single mind ye have taken, bear ye to the end; and whatsoever ye have seen with me and heard, keep and fulfil”.

Henry Tudor, 2nd Earl of Richmond, who was born in Pembroke Castle as a patrilineal descendant of the Tudor Dynasty of North Wales, became King Henry VII of England after his victory over Richard III at the Battle of Bosworth Field in 1485, to end the Wars of the Roses. Henry's green and white banner with a red dragon became a rallying point for Welsh patriotism with the memory of Saint David on his feast day. Henry was the first monarch of the House of Tudor, and during the reign of that dynasty the royal coat of arms included the Welsh Dragon, a reference to the monarch's origin. The banner from Henry's victory was not adapted to become the official flag of Wales until 1959. The flag of Saint David, however, a golden cross on a black background, was not part of the symbolism of House of Tudor.

St David's Day Celebrations and Format

In the Regiment today, this day naturally takes precedence over all others. Military duties permitting, it is marked by ceremonial, sporting and social events with all ranks wearing a leek in their head dress. On the same day, the ceremony of eating the leek is observed. It is safe to assume that St David's Day has been celebrated in the 23rd Regiment since the time of its foundation. One of the traditional toasts is 'Toby Purcell, His Spurs and Saint David.' Toby Purcell was the regiment’s second-in-command, who distinguished himself at the Battle of the Boyne in 1690, and his spurs were worn by successive seconds-in-command until they were unfortunately lost in a fire in Montreal in 1842.

Historical Precedents for St David’s Day

The Royal Welch Fusiliers

The regimental ceremony of eating the leek in the RWF Officers’ Mess remained almost unchanged over the years. Major Donkin in his Military Collections and Remarks of 1777, recorded that ‘Every 1 March being the anniversary of their tutelar Saint, David, the officers give a splendid entertainment to all their welch brethren; and after the cloth is taken away… the band playing the old tune of, ‘The noble race of Shenkin’, when a handsome drum-boy, elegantly dressed, mounted on the goat richly caparisoned for the occasion, is led thrice round the table in procession by the drum-major…’ Although no longer ridden, the goat was still led round the table after dinner, followed by a drummer, fifers, (playing The British Grenadiers) the drum-major carrying a silver salver on which were leeks, and the mess sergeant with a loving cup charged with champagne. They halted by the latest joined subaltern who, having stood on his chair and placed his right foot on the table, was offered a leek. Whilst he ate the leek, the drummer played a continuous roll until it was completely consumed. The mess sergeant then handed him the loving cup for the toast to ‘Saint David’. All those present who had not eaten a leek with the regiment, including guests, were expected to eat one before the party withdrew.

The Royal Regiment of Wales (24th / 41st Foot)

In the Royal Regiment of Wales, before consuming the leek, young subalterns had to lift up their voices in song (or as near as they could get it). They had to sing at least one verse of their chosen opus, with a chorus, in which, they hoped to be assisted by the assembled company. This ordeal over, they devoured the leek as quickly as possible, without taking it from the lips. Next the mess sergeant handed up a goblet filled with beer. The officer raises it in his right hand, while another drumroll is beaten. He then consumed the beer in one draught, toasted 'A Dewi Sant' (To Saint David) and resumed his seat.

The makeup of St David’s Day is essentially the same across both battalions. Operational /training events can dictate changes to the format each year.

Loyal Toast

The Loyal Toast is only to be proposed in the Mess on St David’s Day. However, Mess members are to conform to the traditions of any other mess they are within.

The Wearing of a Leek

According to legend on the eve of the battle against the Saxons, Saint David advised the Britons to wear leeks in their caps so as to easily distinguish friend from foe. This helped to secure a great victory. Today Welsh people around the world wear leeks on St David’s Day.

The Wearing of a Daffodil

The Welsh for leek (the original national emblem) is Cenhinen, while the Welsh for daffodil is Cenhinen Pedr. Over the years they became confused until the daffodil was adopted as a second emblem of Wales.

Format for St David’s Day Parade – RSM 1st Battalion

Rorke’s Drift Day (22nd January).
Order of the Day

To commemorate the 24th’s action in the Anglo-Zulu war in 1879 and the immortal Defence of Rorke’s Drift, at which this regiment was awarded seven Victoria Crosses.

The Battle of Rorke’s Drift, also known as the Defence of Rorke's Drift, was a battle in the Anglo-Zulu War. The defence of the mission station of Rorke’s Drift, under the command of Lieutenants John Chard of the Royal Engineers and Gonville Bromhead, immediately followed the British Army’s defeat at the Battle of Isandlwana on 22 January 1879 and continued into the following day.

Just over 150 British and colonial troops successfully defended the garrison against an intense assault by 3,000 to 4,000 Zulu warriors. The massive but piecemeal Zulu attacks on Rorke's Drift came very close to defeating the much smaller garrison but were ultimately repelled. Eleven Victoria Crosses were awarded to Alma Day (20 September).
Order of the Day

The Battle of the Alma was the first major engagement in the Crimean War, which saw the 23rd and 41st fighting side by side. The battle was fought between an allied expeditionary force made up of French, British and Turkish forces and Russian forces defending the Crimean Peninsula on 20 September 1854. The allies had made a surprise landing in Crimea on 14 September. The allied commanders, Maréchal Jacques Leroy de Saint-Arnaud and Lord FitzRoy Somerset Raglan, then marched toward the strategically important port city of Sevastopol, 45 kilometres (28 miles) away. Russian commander Prince Alexander Sergeyevich Menshikov rushed his available forces to the last natural defensive position before the city, the Alma Heights, south of the Alma River. The allies made a series of disjointed attacks. The French turned the Russian left flank with an attack up cliffs that the Russians had considered un-scalable. The British initially waited to see the outcome of the French attack, then twice unsuccessfully assaulted the Russians' main position on their right. Eventually superior British rifle fire forced the Russians to retreat. With both flanks turned, the Russian position collapsed, and they fled. The lack of cavalry meant that there was little pursuit.

The battle cost the French 1,600 casualties, the British 2,000 and the Russians some 5,000.

It was during this Battle that Sergeant Luke O'Connor and Captain Edward Bell were awarded Victoria Crosses for their actions that day.

On this day, the Officers' and Warrant Officers' and Sergeants' Messes hold a combined regimental dinner night.

Other dates that 'may' be used and utilised for set functions if required are:

Waterloo Day (18 June)
Order of the Day

The Battle of Waterloo was fought on Sunday, 18 June 1815, near Waterloo in present-day Belgium, then part of the United Kingdom of the Netherlands. A French army under the command of Emperor Napoleon Bonaparte was defeated by two of the armies of the Seventh Coalition: a British-led Allied army under the command of the Duke of Wellington, and a Prussian army under the command of Gebhard Leberecht von Blücher, Prince of Wahlstatt. The battle marked the end of the Napoleonic Wars. Both the 23rd Regiment of Foot (Royal Welsh Fusiliers) and the 69th (South Lincolnshire) Regiment of Foot fought together at this decisive battle.

Gheluvelt Day (31 October)
Order of the Day

On 31 October 1914, the Germans made a supreme effort to break through to Ypres and on to the Channel ports, and it was one of the most critical days of the war. 1 SWB held a position in front of the chateau with 2 WELCH on their right and in front of the village. Shortly before daybreak there was a tremendous artillery bombardment, followed by repeated infantry attacks. By 10.00 hours 2 WELCH had been virtually wiped out, including their CO, Colonel Morland, killed by a shell burst as he rallied the remnants of his men for a counter-attack. The enemy were now able to enfilade the right flank of 1 SWB and forced them back across the chateau grounds. The situation was desperate. 2nd WORCESTERS, practically the last reserve of the 1st Corps, were sent in to retake Gheluvelt. They, with assistance from the remnants of 1 SWB, drove back the enemy and virtually re-established the original line held by the 1st Division. Ypres and the ports were saved. Gheluvelt is remembered with special pride for what Sir John French described as “the indomitable courage and dogged tenacity” shown by the defenders.
Gheluvelt Greetings are sent each year on Gheluvelt day between The Royal Welsh and The Mercian Regiment.

SECTION 9
REGIMENTAL MUSIC & MILITARY MUSIC

Throughout the ages, music has inspired soldiers to deeds of heroism in battle, put a spring in their step on the march, added tone and colour to their ceremonial occasions and played an important role in their daily lives. Until comparatively recent times drums and bugles were used to transmit orders on the battlefield.

THE REGIMENTAL MARCHES

The Regimental Quick March. Men of Harlech, the version previously used by the South Wales Borderers and the Royal Regiment of Wales. The opening four bars are not played when the music is repeated.

The Regimental Slow March. Men of Glamorgan and Forth to the Battle. Slow march previously used by the Royal Welch Fusiliers. Despite the way the work is titled the first tune is Forth to the Battle. Occasions when the Regimental Slow March is played include:
- When marching past a saluting base in slow time;
- When marching the Regimental Colours into church.

Formed bodies of the Regiment will march past to the Regimental March. The following old Regimental Marches may be played in the regimental areas appropriate to them, or on any occasion or parade which has territorial or antecedent regimental connections, or when a substantial number of spectators from that part of the regimental area are present. Examples of this are as follows: the Royal Welsh gathering in September in Wrexham; Freedom parades in North Wales where British Grenadiers is played before the regimental march; parades leading comrades from Cardiff Castle where Ap Shenkin should be played as the parade leaves the castle; and parades for the Monmouthshire Regiment where Ap Shenkin may be played in addition to the Regimental March.

OTHER TRADITIONAL REGIMENTAL MUSIC

- Mess Occasions. On dinner nights in a mess the band or ensemble music programme may appropriately include:
  - Before the Regimental Marches: ‘Vesper Hymns’.
- Regimental Days. Certain music has a traditional place in the celebration of our regimental days
  - Alma Day: British Grenadiers between any readings of accounts of the battle.
  - Rorke’s Drift: Zulu, Men of Harlech.
- St David’s Day: Regimental Slow March played while the diners enter.
PARADE MUSIC - MARCHES:

• ‘MAMETZ WOOD’. Written for the Royal Welsh for their presentation of colours in June 2015 by Major Denis Burton, Director of Music Royal Welsh. A quick march with musical references to all the antecedent regiments who fought in the battle. Mametz Wood was the initial objective of 38th (Welsh) Division during the Somme offensive 1 July 1916.

• ‘THE LIBERATORS’. A quick march written by Charles Ancliffe, Bandmaster 1st Battalion The South Wales Borderers. 1900-1918. He became prominent composer of light music with many waltzes and dances written for the Edwardian ballroom. His other military marches include: Castles in Spain, Old Soldier and Ironsides.

• ‘THE CHAMPIONS’. A Brass band quick march composed by George Henry Willcocks, Bandmaster 2nd Battalion The South Wales Borderers 1926-1937. He went on to serve with the Royal Artillery and Irish Guards Bands. Military marches include Sarafand, Guards Armoured Division and Rhythm of the Line as well as several brass band marches including the Pondashers.

PREVIOUS REGIMENTAL MARCHES:
Regimental marches as such were not common until the latter half of the nineteenth century. Before that time, our predecessors are known to have favoured a variety of spirited popular and traditional airs.

23rd FOOT (ROYAL WELCH FUSILIERS)

• THE BRITISH GRENADIERS. The Regimental March. In 1882 The British Grenadiers became the official quickstep of all Fusilier regiments. The tune is very old and is to be found in varying forms at different periods. First appeared in its present form in print in about 1740. The words of the song can be no older than 1678 when Grenadier companies were first formed.

• MEN OF HARLECH. The Regimental quickstep used in addition to British Grenadiers. The actual composer is unknown. It first appeared in print in 1794 when it was included in Musical and Poetical Relics of the Welsh Bards, edited by the harpist Edward Jones. The song is believed to commemorate the heroic defence of Harlech castle which was besieged by the Earl of Pembroke during the Wars of the Roses.

• MEN OF GLAMORGAN (FORTH TO THE BATTLE). The Regimental Slow March. The tune is that of the War Song of the Men of Glamorgan. In consequence of taxes levied by King Edward I towards defraying the costs of his wars in Germany, formidable insurrection took place throughout Wales; several provincial leaders led this opposition in the year 1294. Morgan, a chieftain of Morganwg, put himself at the head of the oppressed Cymru in that district, drove out the Earl of Gloucester and regained the territory which the nobleman’s predecessors had formerly deprived his ancestors. This war song was chosen by Morgan to animate the march of his followers. Despite the way the work is titled the first tune is Forth to the Battle.

• LAND OF MY FATHERS. The National Anthem of Wales was composed by James James and the words were written by Evan James of Pontypridd. It was first sung at the famous Llangollen Eisteddfod in 1858 and it first appeared in print two years later in Gems of Welsh Melody.

• GOD BLESS THE PRINCE OF WALES. Composed in 1862 by Brinley Richards, a Welsh composer, pianist and teacher. Used as a toast and Regimental Song.

• ROYAL WELCH FUSILIERS. Quick March composed by John Phillip Sousa the March King. Written at the request of the United States Marine Corps in remembrance of their association with the Second Battalion the Royal Welch Fusiliers during the Boxer rebellion of 1900. The first performance of the march took place at the Gridiron Club, Washington in 1930, in the presence of President Hoover who, as a young man, was in Peking in 1900 when the United States Marine Corps and the Royal Welch Fusiliers marched together to the relief of their embassies. Shortly before his death in 1932, Sousa visited the 1st Battalion the Royal Welch Fusiliers in Tidworth and conducted the Regimental Band in a performance of this march.

- REGIMENTAL TOASTS ON ST DAVIDS DAY
  - Saint David to the air “Of noble race was Shenkin”
  - John Peel
  - Jenny Jones
  - Here’s to the Maiden
  - For He’s a Jolly Good fellow
  - When the Royal Navy mutinied at the Nore and Spithead in 1797 the naval mutineers invited the regiment to join them. The Welshmen scorned their invitation and instead submitted an address to the Colonel expressing their loyalty and devotion to the King. This was conveyed to His Majesty who is reputed to have granted a dispensation from drinking his health at the weekly guest night adding that it need only be drunk once a year and the day selected was St David’s day. On this day the name St David is coupled with the sovereign.

- TOBY PURCELL’S SPURS. The Regiment has a toast to the spurs of Major Tobias Purcell. He was the first Senior Major (Second in Command) of the regiment and fought gallantly at the Battle of the Boyne in 1690. After Colonel Herbert had been killed, Purcell succeeded to the command. The spurs he wore were kept in the regiment and handed to each succeeding Senior Major, being produced for inspection on St David’s night as proof they were protected, and they would be toasted. The house of Major Holmes was burnt down at Montreal Canada in 1846 and the spurs destroyed but this disaster did not prevent the toast “Toby Purcell, His spurs” from being honoured regularly.

- SHENKIN AP MORGAN. A toast accompanied by the air “of Noble race was Shenkin”, advantage being taken to give due praise to the virtues of Welshmen. No one has succeeded in finding the true identity of Shenkin, if he ever existed.

- EATING THE LEEK. In the Officers’ Mess the routine after dinner is for the Band or drums to strike up with British Grenadiers. The Goat led by the Goat major bearing a silver salver with leeks upon it, a drummer and the mess sergeant bearing a loving cup enter the room and march around it. The procession moves to the latest joined officer who rises and stands on his chair with his right foot on the table He takes a leek from the slaver and the drummer rolls until the whole of the leek is consumed. The officer then takes the loving cup and toasts “A Dewi Sant” Leeks are then issued to other officers and Guests. Men of Harlech is played as the procession leaves.

24th Foot (SOUTH WALES BORDERERS)

- MEN OF HARLECH. The regimental quick march adopted in 1881 on the regiment assuming the designation South Wales Borderers. The actual composer is unknown. It first appeared in print in 1794 when it was included in Musical and Poetical Relics of the Welsh Bards, edited by the harpist Edward Jones. The song is believed to commemorate the heroic defence of Harlech castle which was besieged by the Earl of Pembroke during the Wars of the Roses.

- THE WARWICKSHIRE LADS. The regimental quick march prior to 1881. From 1782-1881 the designation of the regiment was the 24th (Second Warwickshire) Regiment. The tune is an adaptation of the Warwickshire Lads composed by Charles Dibdin for the Shakespeare centenary celebrations in 1769. This popular song was almost immediately adopted as a county tune and in 1782 it became the regimental quick march of the 6th Foot (Royal Warwickshire Regiment).

- AP SHENKIN. The regimental quick march of the Monmouthshire Regiment (TA) a regiment which was affiliated to the South Wales Borderers and was part of the Welsh Brigade. The song Ap Shenkin was composed in 1803 by John Parry, then the bandmaster of the Denbigh Militia. He settled in London as a theatre composer and critic for the Morning Post as well as conducting Welsh festivals in Wrexham and Brecon.
• THE NOBLE 24th. Song composed by Vincent Davies in the 1880s commemorating the heroic defence of Rorke’s Drift by B Company the 24th of Foot (later South Wales Borderers) in January 1879.

41st Foot (THE WELCH REGIMENT)

• AP SHENKIN. The Regimental Quick March. The song Ap Shenkin was composed in 1803 by John Parry, known as the Master of Song (Barrd Alaw). He spent ten years as the Bandmaster of the Denbigh Militia, before coming a London theatre composer and critic for the Morning Post. He conducted Welsh festivals in Wrexham and Brecon in the 1820s.

• MEN OF HARLECH. The Regimental Slow March. The actual composer is unknown. It first appeared in print in 1794 when it was included in Musical and Poetical Relics of the Welsh Bards, edited by the harpist Edward Jones. The song is believed to commemorate the heroic defence of Harlech Castle which was besieged by the Earl of Pembroke during the Wars of the Roses.

• THE LINCOLNSHIRE POACHER. The regimental quick march of the 69th (South Lincolnshire) Regiment which in 1881 was to become the 2nd Battalion The Welch Regiment.

• LAND OF MY FATHERS. The National Anthem of Wales was composed by James James and the words were written by Evan James of Pontypridd. It was first sung at the famous Llangollen Eisteddfod in 1858 and it first appeared in print two years later in Gems of Welsh Melody.

• THE MAPLE LEAF FOREVER. Played on appropriate occasions in recognition of the alliance of The Ontario Regiment with The Welch Regiment.

• WALTZING MATILDA. Played on appropriate occasions in recognition of the alliance between The St Georges Regiment of Australia with The Welch Regiment.

• SUN OF MY SOUL – SPANISH CHANT – VESPER HYMN. Many years ago the First Battalion instituted a peculiar custom whereby the Regimental band would perform these three hymns every Sunday evening at 9.30pm. The origin of the custom remains a mystery. One theory alleges that it commenced during the Afghan war of 1842; another suggests it may be from the period of the Crimean War. A similar tradition had occurred in the 12th Lancers for which they had three theories:

  o They had been in Italy and the conduct of the men was so good that they had impressed the Pope and he had presented three hymns which they were requested to play (in their case) daily.

  o The regiment was given a new set of instruments and one of the conditions was that the band would play Vesper Hymn and two others (in their case) daily.

  o In the Peninsula campaign the regiment behaved badly in a nunnery and some others purloined 104 bottles of wine from a monastery. The Duke of Wellington is supposed to have ordered that the band of the regiment play the Spanish chant and two other hymns every night for the next 104 years. The tradition was kept on much longer though not on a daily basis beyond the 104 years.

THE ROYAL REGIMENT OF WALES

• MEN OF HARLECH. The Regimental Quick March. The actual composer is unknown. It first appeared in print in 1794 when it was included in Musical and Poetical Relics of the Welsh Bards, edited by the harpist Edward Jones. The song is believed to commemorate the heroic defence of Harlech castle which was besieged by the Earl of Pembroke during the Wars of the Roses.
• MARCH FROM SCIPIO. The Regimental Slow March. This stately tune comes from Handel’s Opera “Scipio”, first performed in London in 1726. Tradition suggests that the composer wrote this long before it occurred for him to bolster up his somewhat tenuous score of his opera with its martial strains, possibly as a result of watching changing of the guard in London.

REGIMENTAL BANDS

• The Regimental Band. The Regiment has an Army Reserve band based in Wales, The Regimental Band of The Royal Welsh. Until April 2014 it was uniquely the only all brass band in the British Army but its strength of parade sound and overall success was mirrored in the regular army with the re-designation of three bands to become brass band styled. The reason for the Regimental Band being all brass can be traced to the early years of the 20th century when the 2nd Monmouthshire Regiment recruited the entire colliery band from a pit near Abercarn. The 3rd Battalion Corps of Drums are based with the Band in Raglan Barracks, Newport.

The Regimental Fanfare Trumpet Banners. The Fanfare Trumpet Banners are to be made of dark blue (Garter blue) cord silk, edged with a green border and gold strands, with a regimental crest embroidered centrally on each side in gold wire and coloured silks.

Regimental Music Stand Banners. These banners are to be of dark (Royal) blue superfine cloth (Hainsworth's No. 205 Garter blue), edged with a green border and gold strands, with a regimental crest embroidered centrally. The banners are to have a pointed tip at the bottom, and in style are otherwise to match the Fanfare Banners.

• THE CORPS OF DRUMS The Regiment has had drummers since its formation in 1689. Their prime purposes were to transmit commands and beat a marching cadence on the battlefield and to regulate daily routine in camp, but their lively music put a spring into soldiers’ step and heightened their martial ardour long before the general introduction of regimental bands. Today each battalion has a Corps of Drums, providing pageantry. The greater part of their uniforms and accoutrements are provided from regimental funds. The Corps of Drums in each battalion is commanded by the Drum Major, who is responsible to the Adjutant, for their training and turnout.

DRUM HOOP MARKINGS

Various designs have in the past been used for our regimental drums. The messes and museums have examples of our antecedent regimental drums. The Royal Welsh drums have emblazoned on them the Regimental Crest and several battle honours. The hoops of drums which are in use by both battalions are to be painted in a dog-tooth blue/thin red/green pattern (blue towards the rims). All regimental drums were refurbished and repainted in 2015 for the presentation of Colours by HM The Queen.
SECTION 9

THE REGIMENTAL CHAPELS AND MEMORIALS IN THE UNITED KINGDOM

A. St David Chapel, Llandaff Cathedral Cardiff (WELCH, RRW & R WELSH)

St David Chapel in Llandaff Cathedral was officially dedicated as the Regimental Chapel of The Royal Welsh on 5 November 2011, whilst also retaining its role with The Welch Regiment and The Royal Regiment of Wales.

Within the St David Chapel is The Royal Welsh Book of Remembrance and memorial board along with many memorials to the Welch Regiment and the Royal Regiment of Wales. The Queens and Regimental Colours of 1st Battalion Royal Regiment of Wales are also laid up within this chapel.

Previously known as the Welch Regiment Chapel, designed by George Pace and dedicated on the 22 of September 1956 in memory of the fallen of all wars since the 18th Century. Brass floor tablets and pew ends commemorate officers of the Welch Regiment, Royal Regiment of Wales and The Royal Welsh, and stones on the east wall remember the battles the Regiment were involved with from 1792 to 1969.

Against the first pillar of the chapel stands the medieval Majestas, which stood in the gable of the West Front until 1984.

B. St Giles’ Parish Church Wrexham (RWF)

The north aisle of St Giles Parish Church is the home of the Regimental Chapel of the Royal Welch Fusiliers. The chapel houses the Colours to the RWF and contains many memorials to its soldiers.

The connection between St Giles Church Wrexham and the Royal Welch Fusiliers stems from 1873 when Wrexham was designated the 23rd Regimental District Headquarters of the Royal Welch Fusiliers, but there was no large representation of the regular battalions there until the barracks was built and taken over in August 1877. In spite of this delay, the parish church seems to have been the spiritual focal-point of the Regiment, as the Regiment’s memorial to those who died during the Ashantee Campaign 1873-74 was erected there, and others followed.
In 1893 records show that a ‘subscription should be raised towards the cost of a screen in Wrexham Church’ and in 1894 ‘each officer to subscribe two days’ pay towards the Memorial Chapel at Wrexham’. On 20th September 1895, the anniversary of the Battle of the Alma, The Soldiers’ Window was unveiled. Other memorials, including the upright stone brought from the heights of the Alma in the Crimea listing those who were lost in the battle, brass plaques to those who fell in the China War of 1900 and the South African War of 1899 to 1902 were set up in the Chapel.

In 1921 the Union Flags of the service battalions of the Great War were laid up in the Chapel and later two stands of Colours of the 4th Battalion Royal Welch Fusiliers (TA) were added.

In 1974 it was decided to improve the furnishing and general appearance of the Regimental Chapel and an appeal was launched for money and gifts. After three years of preparation the new Regimental Memorial Chapel was dedicated on 11 September 1977.

In 1985/86 the Chapel was moved from the West End of the Church to its present location at the end of the North Aisle. To commemorate the 300 years of service from 1689 to 1989 the Regiment commissioned Mr Joseph Nuttgens to design and make a stained-glass window to be mounted in the new Regimental Chapel. The Tercentenary Window was dedicated by the Bishop of St Asaph at a Service of Remembrance and Rededication on 23 April 1989.

C. The Havard Chapel, Brecon Cathedral (SWB)

The Havard Chapel is the Regimental Chapel of the South Wales Borderers (24th Regiment) and contains the Colours and many memorials to its illustrious soldiers.

The Havard Chapel was originally two shorter chapels which were then extended and brought into one, probably in the 14th century. It has long been linked with The Havards of Pontwylim. By 1572 this was known as The Vicar’s Chapel. The Havards, a local family of great influence were descendants of the Norman Knight, Sir Walter Havard to whom Pontwylim and other lands were granted by Bernard de Neufmarch, the Marcher baron who first conquered and took possession in the 2nd century.

Military connections between the Cathedral and the 24th Regiment of Foot (to become the South Wales Borderers in 1881) date back to 1873, when their depot opened in the barracks on the Watton in the town, and from where many Welsh soldiers went out to the Zulu War in South Africa in 1879. Such was the impact of this war upon the town of Brecon that the main east window in the Cathedral was dedicated in 1882, along with a number of brass tablets in the north transept, to all those officers and soldiers who had lost their lives. The large brass plaque, listing every soldier by name, on the right of the Chapel altar, was added in 1892.

It was, however, the First World War which became the catalyst to create a lasting memorial to the 311 officers and 5,466 soldiers of the Regiment who lost their lives. On 25 May 1922, the Havard Chapel became the Regimental Memorial Chapel.

A plaque to honour the 1,025 officers and men of the Regiment who died in the Second World War was installed after 1945 and as the Colours of successive battalions of the Regiment were laid up they were suspended from the ceiling.

The large, threadbare Colours in the northern corner to the left of the Altar are known as the Chillianwallah Colours. They were carried into battle during the Second Sikh War when, on the 13th January 1849, the Regiment lost 22 officers and 500 men attempting to capture the Sikh Gun Batteries. The Queen’s Colour was lost (but not captured and was replaced in 1850) and the Regimental Colour was rescued by Private Perry when Ensign Collis was killed. Both Colours were replaced in 1868 and laid up in the Beauchamp Chapel in St Mary’s, Warwick, as the Regiment was, at the time, the 2nd Battalion of The Warwickshire Regiment (but still the 24th Regiment of Foot). In 1925 a request was made to house the Colours in the new spiritual home - the Regimental Chapel at Brecon - and after protracted opposition from a number of Bishops and Diocesan Councils in Warwick, the Colours eventually came to the Chapel in 1936.

Many visitors come to see the Colours of the Zulu War. Unique in the annals of British military history and now conserved in specially designed protective cases, suspended from the right-hand wall facing the Altar, these Colours were presented to the 24th Regiment in 1868 (to replace the afore mentioned Chillianwallah Colours) and then carried onto the Zulu War battlefield of Isandlwana on 22 January 1879. The Regimental Colour had, for unknown reasons, been left behind in the reserve base at Helpmekaar, and it was the Queen’s Colour that Lieutenants Melvill and Coghill gave their lives attempting to save. They were subsequently awarded the Victoria Cross, posthumously, in 1908, the nation's highest possible award for bravery in the face of the enemy.

When the Regiment returned home to England, Queen Victoria asked to see the Colours and on 25 July 1880 at Osborne House on the Isle of Wight, placed a wreath of Immortelles (flowers) on them in honour of all those who had died in that war. On 15 December 1880, authority was granted for the Regiment to carry a silver wreath at the top of the Colour in perpetuity — unique throughout the British army — and this can be seen on a number of Colours in the Chapel.

The Zulu War Colours were laid up in 1934, having been carried by the Regiment for 67 years. (The normal life span of Colours is about 25 years). They have been repaired twice — in 1979 and 1984 — and were eventually cased through the generosity of the late Major Basil Walters in 2002. They are suspended in their protective cases above the oak panelling on the right-hand side of the Chapel.

The original Wreath of Immortelles was stolen from the Chapel on 6th May 1980, when thieves broke into the Cathedral looking for silver. The wreath was eventually found under the bridge on Priory Hill, leading up to the Cathedral and while the casing was intact, the flowers had been washed away. These were replaced from the garden of Major General Lennox Napier (Colonel of the Regiment 1983 — 1989) and the Wreath is now firmly fixed to the wall and is alarmed for security.

A final point to note is that the Chapel does not belong to the Regiment. It is very much part of the fabric of the Cathedral and is used regularly for non-military services. The Regiment — now named The Royal Welsh after several amalgamations — has the honour of being able to commemorate its distinguished heritage here and is very proud and grateful for that privilege. The individual memorial plaques on the backs of the pews are privately arranged and funded between regimental families and the Chapel Trust.

D.  St Cadoc’s Church, Trevethin, Pontypool (Monmouthshire Regiment)

The south transept of St Cadoc's Church is the Memorial Chapel of the 2nd Battalion, the Monmouthshire Regiment.

The unveiling and dedication of the memorial to the officers and men of the 2nd Battalion, the Monmouthshire Regiment and South Wales Borderers who died in the Second World War took place on Saturday 7 July 1951. On that day, oak panelling bearing the names of 580 men who fell in the Great War was unveiled and dedicated.

Also, inscribed on the panelling on the walls of the chapel are the names of 229 officers and men who died in Second World War. A cabinet containing the South Wales Borderers 1939-45 Roll of Honour is installed containing the book of names of the Great War dead.

Amen.

The Regimental Memorials (United Kingdom)

Royal Welch Fusiliers Memorial, Bodhyfryd, Wrexham. The Royal Welch Fusiliers memorial was erected in 1924, originally at the junction of Regent Street and Grosvenor Road, and moved to Bodhyfryd, its present site, after the Second World War. By sculptor Sir W. Gascombe John, the monument has a central pedestal surmounted by figures in the 18th Century and 20th Century uniforms of the Royal Welch Fusiliers. An inscription, commemorating the dead of the First World War is flanked by low quadrant walls which carry Second World War inscriptions, and have laurel-band cornice and raking copings. The walls terminate in stepped piers with segmental caps, and low relief emblems. The quadrant walls enclose a cobbled surface with raised up steps.

The Welch Regiment Memorial, Maindy Barracks, Cardiff. The Welch Regiment Memorial was designed by Sir Edwin Lutyens and follows his design for the Cenotaph on Whitehall in London. Unveiled in 1924, it commemorates men of the Welch Regiment who fell in the First World War and is today a grade II listed building. The memorial consists of a cenotaph in Portland stone which stands on a stepped plinth and a square base, all standing on a base of three shallow steps. The north and south faces bear inscriptions in English and Welsh (respectively), while the east and west faces contain the regiment's role of honour from the First and Second World Wars (respectively). Inscriptions relating to the Second World War and the Korean War (1950–1953) were added later. The upper sections of the east and west faces bear carvings of a laurel wreath in high relief, while regimental cap badges are carved on the lower stages of each face. The memorial was unveiled on 11 November 1924 by Major-General Sir Thomas Marden, with the dedication carried out by the Reverend Ernest Thorold.

The South Wales Borderers Memorial, Royal Hospital Chelsea, London. The Chillianwallah Memorial commemorates the 1849 battle of that name during the Second Sikh War. The granite obelisk was unveiled in 1853 to commemorate the 251 lives of the 24th foot that fell at Chillianwallah on 13 January 1849. The monument's architect was C R Cokerell and was erected by the surviving comrades in 1853. It is nearly 12 metres high and the original cost was £600 contributed by officers of the regiment.

Monmouthshire Regiment Memorial, Abergavenny. The memorial was set up to commemorate the soldiers of the 3rd Battalion of the Monmouthshire Regiment who died in the Great War of 1914-18, later known as the First World War. 374 local men died, 311 of them in the second battle of Ypres, Belgium, in spring 1915. The impact of these losses on the local area is reflected in the deaths, on the same day in May 1915, of the husband and son of Mary Pritchard, who lived in Mardy.

The original memorial named the First World War battles in which the men from Abergavenny and the area to the west, as far as Tredegar, were killed. It was erected by public subscription from the people of this area. It was unveiled in October 1921 by Major General Lord Treowen, in front of a crowd of 3,000 to 4,000 people. The figure of a soldier, leaning on a Lee Enfield rifle, was sculpted by Gilbert Ledward. The names of Second World War battles in which the regiment fought were added later.

The memorial in Frogmore Street, being in an open location, is the focus of the town’s annual Remembrance Sunday ceremony.

First World War battles listed on this memorial are: Wulverghem, 2nd Battle of Ypres, Dickebushe, Kemmel, Yser Canal, The Somme.

The Royal Welsh Memorial, NMA, Alrewas. The official memorial of The Royal Welsh is situated at the National Memorial Arboretum, Alrewas. The dedication of The Royal Welsh memorial took place on Saturday 9 September 2017.

The memorial is intended to represent all former antecedent regiments of The Royal Welsh (Royal Welch Fusiliers, Royal Regiment of Wales, South Wales Borderers, Welch Regiment & Monmouthshire Regiment) and to recognise both the regiments' former and future existence.

The memorial consists of a 10ft Welsh slate monolith with a Bronze casting of The Royal Welsh Cap Badge at its centre. A slate plaque with the full inscription utilising words from Hedd Wyn’s poem are below and is translated in both Welsh and English. Private Ellis Humphrey Evans (Hedd Wyn) of 15th Bn RWF, was killed in action 31 July 1917 and is buried in Artillery Wood Cemetery, Belgium.

The Slate monolith is flanked by an echelon Welsh slate wall behind and to the side - capped off with matching Welsh slate copings and the insetting of six oval antecedent slate plaques to the antecedent regiments. The pathway is shaped to represent the ‘Flash’ and is fitted with riven finish Welsh Slate paving slabs. Two plinths fashioned in the same style as the echelon wall sit either side of the central monolith and provide detail about the memorial itself and a brief history of the Regiment.

Note: Along with the various memorials mentioned above, there are also distinctive battalion memorials to the 6th Battalion, The South Wales Borderers and 1st (Rifle) Battalion, The Monmouthshire Regiment in St Woolos Cathedral, Newport and to 3rd Battalion, The Monmouthshire Regiment in St Mary’s Priory Church, Abergavenny. The west window of St David’s Cathedral is dedicated to 4th Battalion The Welsh Regiment; The Obelisk on Stalling Down Common, Cowbridge is dedicated to Glamorgan Yeomanry who served as 24th Battalion The Welsh Regiment in the First World War; A memorial within St Asaph Cathedral is dedicated to Denbighshire (Hussars) Yeomanry who served as the 24th Battalion Royal Welch Fusiliers in the First World War.

SECTION 10

THE REGIMENTAL MUSEUMS

INTRODUCTION

The Royal Welsh is fortunate to have been endowed with a rich material heritage, much of which is on display or otherwise accessible in our three regimental museum collections:

- The Royal Welch Fusiliers' Regimental Museum (Carnarvon)
- The Regimental Museum of the Royal Welsh (Brecon)
- Firing Line Museum (Cardiff)
PURPOSE OF THE MUSEUMS

The purpose of our regimental museums is to collect, document, preserve, exhibit and interpret material evidence and associated information which illustrate and perpetuate the history and traditions of the Royal Welsh and its antecedents, regular, volunteer and militia, since 1689. Specific functions are:

- To provide a source of inspiration to officers and soldiers of The Royal Welsh.
- To provide a visible and accessible regimental presence across our regimental recruiting area, projecting the Regiment in a positive manner.

CONSTITUTION

Each of the three museum collections is governed by a separate charitable deed of trust and has its own trustees.

The Royal Welch Fusiliers, Caernarfon

The Royal Welch Fusiliers Regimental Museum is housed in the Queen's and Chamberlain's Towers of the thirteenth-century castle built by Edward I at Caernarfon, North Wales. The museum was founded in 1952 at Wrexham and moved to Caernarfon in 1960 on the closure of the Regimental Depot. The displays, which are laid out on five floors, cover the history of the regiment since 1689 and include pictures, prints, weapons, medals, uniforms, insignia and badges, Colours and much more. Among the artefacts on display is the enemy gun captured by Captain Edward Bell at the Battle of Alma; the action saw him being presented a Victoria Cross by Queen Victoria, it was one of the first Victoria Crosses to be awarded. The museum incorporates the latest display techniques and systems to tell the story of the Royal Welch Fusiliers and offers activities for all ages.

The Museum is open daily all year around except for Christmas Eve, Christmas Day, Boxing Day and New Year's Day.

Admission to the Museum is free within the price of admission to Caernarfon Castle.

The Regimental Museum of The Royal Welsh, Brecon

Formerly the Regimental Museum of The South Wales Borderers and The Royal Regiment of Wales. The Regimental Museum of The Royal Welsh is housed in the oldest building in the Brecon Barracks complex. The museum, created in 1934, was renamed The Regimental Museum of The Royal Welsh in February 2007.

The Royal Welsh is Wales's infantry regiment. It has inherited a distinguished military tradition from its predecessors: The Royal Welch Fusiliers (23rd Foot) and The Royal Regiment of Wales (formerly the 24th, 41st and 69th Foot - and later the South Wales Borderers, Welch Regiment and Monmouthshire Regiment).
Although, in some respects, the story only began on 1 March 2006 when The Royal Welsh was formed, its history reaches back to the year 1689 when the 23rd and 24th Regiments of Foot were first raised.

In over 325 years of service, the Regiment has gained 244 Battle Honours and 43 of its soldiers have received The Victoria Cross. It has been involved in many significant events in British military history, including the British campaign in South Africa (visit us and discover what really happened in the 1879 Zulu War!), and both world wars.

The Regiment today has strong links with Wales and its people, which gives it a distinct flair and esprit de corps. The Museum website can only introduce The Royal Welsh’s rich history and its soldiers. The Regimental Museum in Brecon tells this story in greater detail. The Museum is recognised as one of finest regimental museums in Britain.

Closed on Christmas Day and Boxing Day, and the first two weeks in January.

There is an admission charge to enter the Museum.

Research: Please see the website for details. There will be a charge for this service.

Firing Line, Cardiff
Between 1975 and 2009, the museum of the Welch Regiment (41st / 69th Foot) was housed in the Black and Barbican Towers of Cardiff Castle (artefacts having previously been displayed in Maindy Barracks which provided only limited public access). Of particular interest in the collection are the artefacts relating to the involvement of the 41st Regiment in the war of 1812 in North America and in the Crimea and the 2nd Battalion, 69th Foot in the battles of Quatre Bras and Waterloo in 1815. The Museum was opened to the visitors on 22 February 2010 and officially opened by HRH The Prince of Wales on Armed Forces’ Day 26 June 2010. The archives of the Welch Regiment are now held in Brecon.

The Firing Line Museum is a fully accredited museum that celebrates the Welsh soldier, The Royal Welsh and its antecedent regiments over a period of 300 years; a time which saw ordinary Welshmen travel the world, carrying out military service at battles such as Waterloo (1815) and Rorke’s Drift (1879), and more recently in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Using hands-on, and dressing up activities, informative permanent and temporary displays and educational events, the museum stands as a testament to the extraordinary contributions made by ordinary Welshmen to their regiments.

The Firing Line inspires, educates and entertain visitors in an engaging space helping to connect communities and audiences with the heritage of the Cavalry and Infantry in Wales; encouraging active dialogue about the role of the Armed Forces in Wales.

Admission:

Admission to the Museum is free within the price of admission to Cardiff Castle. Cardiff Castle is open seven days a week, all year (apart from 25, 26 December and 1 January). Please note that last admission to the Castle and its grounds is 5pm (March to October) and 4pm (November to February).

Research: Please see the website for details. There will be a charge for this service.

SECTION 15

REGIMENTAL COMMUNICATIONS

GENERAL

The purposes of regimental communications are to:

- Support the Regiment in its core operational and recruiting activities through proactive, co-ordinated and consistently branded media operations that are designed to reach and engage the target audiences.
- Provide a service to members of the Regiment by providing timely and accessible information about regimental matters.

The focal point for regimental communications is Regimental Headquarters, but every element of the Regiment has an important part to play.

THE REGIMENTAL VISION AND ROYAL WELSH BRAND

Strategy. To clearly articulate to our main target audience who we are, what we do and what makes us unique. Using the Regimental ethos as foundation, all communication must reinforce the core message through the key themes. This will be exploited through all communications channels to raise the profile of the Regiment. All effort must be directed to support recruiting activity, and every activity conducted by the Regiment should seek to find an interesting angle for external communication. Through a bottom-up approach, we will continually refine content based on performance analysis to meet the interests of potential recruits and use content generated by our soldiers to maintain internal engagement.

Purpose. The regimental brand exists to complement the Infantry brand, itself a sub-brand to the Army brand. Specifically, it aims to identify what distinguishes The Royal Welsh from other infantry regiments. The brand is expressed through the regimental ethos, core message and key themes which should shape all communications – within the framework of the Army and Infantry brands.

- The Army Brand. The Army brand reflects the Army’s identity, core values and the attributes that it stands for and aspires to. These characteristics will be reflected in all Army policy, communication and engagement with both internal and external audiences. This provides the baseline from which the Infantry brand is derived, and all Royal Welsh communication must be set within this context.

- Infantry brand. The Infantry brand is derived from the Army brand, adopting much of the same language, tailored to articulate what sets the Infantry apart from the rest of the Army. Although not yet formally endorsed, Royal Welsh communications must reinforce this message, with what distinguishes us from other infantry regiments layered over the top.

Ethos. The Regimental ethos has been developed in two forms: the first as a short paragraph defining what makes someone a Royal Welshman; the second is a condensed version displayed as pithy bullets for use in digital and social media.

- The full version:
The short version:

Core Message. The core message of The Royal Welsh, builds on the Infantry ‘Promise’ to specifically articulate what we want to communicate to our main target audience.

"The Royal Welsh is Wales’ Armoured Infantry and Reserve Regiment and should be the first choice for all Welsh men and women who want to serve in the Army. We are the most experienced and best Armoured Infantry Regiment in the Army, constantly striving for excellence in close combat, whether mounted or dismounted. We provide exciting and rewarding careers, with opportunity for sport, adventure training and travel for all Welsh Warriors, both regular and reserve."

Key themes. All Regimental communication must reinforce the core message and ethos of The Royal Welsh through the following key themes.

- Military training and operations. The full spectrum of military activity which the Regiment conducts (emphasising the variety on offer both geographically and by activity). All aspects of military training should be used to do this, including (but not restricted to) the following:
  - Initial training (ITC(C), AFC(H), RMAS)
  - Individual training and courses (PJMCO Cadres, SCBC, PSBC, Sp Wpn Cadres etc.)
  - Operational Deployments
  - Exercises (all levels)
• Short Term Training Teams
• Education and transferrable skills

• Sport. All the opportunities for sport within the Regiment, whether team sports or individuals (e.g. Rugby, Football, Triathlon) and promoting those selected to represent the Battalion, Infantry, Army and other teams. As well as promoting elite athletes, participation in sport at an ordinary level should be emphasised; sport for all, not just the talented.

• Adventure training. The breadth of adventure training conducted by members of the Regiment, from low-level training to large-scale expeditions. Messaging should emphasise how affordable and accessible this is to all soldiers. Additionally, we should promote how the Regiment will support soldiers gaining qualifications and take on responsibility for planning and leading activities. It is also important to emphasise how adventure training develops the moral component and develops teamwork and leadership.

• Regimental history & traditions. We are a proud Regiment, steeped in hundreds of years of history, and must celebrate this through all our communications, internally and externally. Battle honours, VC winners and other key moments in regimental history should be shared on social media to reinforce the importance of our history. These posts should inspire people to choose The Royal Welsh and make those serving proud of the Regiment they are in.

MEDIA OPERATIONS

Command and Control. Media operations are coordinated by the Regimental Communication Working Group, a Committee approved body. It is headed up by an OF3 from each Battalion and assisted by numerous OF2s to assist coordination of unit activity. All digital social media activity is conducted in accordance with British Army Social Media Policy and executed in conjunction with MOD Media Operations staff. This in order to project a positive and consistently regimentally branded view of activities and achievements.

Plans and Strategy. Like any other aspect of operations, media operations will constantly evolve to take account of current and future opportunities and challenges. The Communications Working Group will routinely re-visit both the Communication Strategy and the Regimental Branding Guidelines on a bi-annual basis. Once approved by the Regimental Committee, major amendments will be published by the Regimental Adjutant as direction to be followed.

Brand recognition. The Regiment’s principal visible symbol is the cap badge, which is worn by all members of the regimental family and is used throughout all extant regimental messaging. Additionally, the flash, hackle and regimental crest are also key elements in the regimental brand. However, it is important to ensure that these symbols are used in a coherent manner. The regimental brand must also comply with Army direction following the release of the Army brand.

Coherence. To maximise effect, the Regiment must speak with one voice and be relatable to the target audience. To that end, both the 1st and 3rd Battalions will communicate online through regimental accounts, with the Regimental Band also migrating to these channels. In addition to coherency, this will assist with generating the volume of content required to be effective online.

Social Media Platforms. 95% of males aged 16-22 in Wales use at least one form of social media each day. These are the recruits and Royal Welshmen of the future. As such, this area of communication needs to be utilised and opportunities to promote, attract, inform and support need to be seized. Success will only be possible if each battalion encourages a culture of sending photos, videos and updates to RHQ to post online.
• Instagram (@theroyalwelsh). This is a reasonably new venture and is the focus of all output due to the potential target audience using the platform. It focuses on describing the events and activities carried out by the Regiment in primarily photographic form.

• Facebook (The Royal Welsh). The regimental site has been refreshed to replicate a more modern regiment. This produces one single source of information with an accurate and consistent message. The regimental policy is formalised and developed by RHQ and the Regimental Adjutant.

• Twitter (@TheRoyalWelsh). A steady drumbeat of updates is required to keep the feed credible and interesting. Linking in with other members, Welsh celebrities and popular organisations/people is vital to widening the current network and thus reinforces the promote, attract, inform and support functions.

Audiences

• Primary. The primary target audience for regimental communication is 16 – 24 year olds from Wales and the borders, focusing on attracting and engaging with them, to make our Regiment their first choice if considering joining the Army.

• Secondary. Soldiers currently serving with the Regiment and their families, engendering regimental pride and encouraging retention.

• Tertiary. Regimental communication must also engage the following groups:
  - Veterans & Comrades. Keeping veterans and comrades engaged with the Regiment. Reminding them of their experiences (in a positive light) will not only make them feel valued but will encourage them to recommend the Regiment to those considering an Army career. Veterans should be seen as key ambassadors for the Regiment and as potential recruiters.
  - Employers. Support from employers within Wales is vital to the success of the 3rd Battalion and recruitment of reservists.
  - Gatekeepers. Educational establishments, cadet forces, sporting clubs and other institutions are a route by which we can broaden the appeal of the Regiment – if we engage with them and make them feel connected to the Regiment, they will be more likely to recommend us to their audiences.
  - Media. Our reach of communication activity can be greatly increased via established media organisations. To achieve this, we must work closely with Army Media Wales & South West England who will be able to exploit regimental activity with traditional local and national media organisations.
  - Decision makers. The degree to which the Regiment is recognised and understood by national level decision makers, may have a significant impact when strategic decisions are taken about the Army. Engagement with these leaders, both in Wales and Westminster is key, led by RHQ.

Enquiries. Media enquiries of a regimental nature will in general be dealt with by Regimental Headquarters, guided by the Regional Brigade Media Operations staff; those relating to a specific battalion will be dealt with by that battalion in close co-operation with its chain of command’s Media Operations staff, keeping Regimental Headquarters informed.

The Regimental Family. The Regiment prides itself on being a close-knit family whose component parts, serving, retired and supporters, draw strength and inspiration from each other. This includes:
• The Regiment thinking of itself as one unit.

• Ensuring all battalions are regularly aware of each other’s activities and celebrate each other’s success. This will engender a sense of the Regiment as a whole.

• The Regiment aspires to be a strong, fair, inclusive and meritocratic family, a true band of brothers with a strong bond of mutual respect between all ranks and echelons.

• The Regiment values the vital support given to our officers and soldiers by their families.

• The Regiment draws its strength and character from a traditionally supportive home base in Wales, an ‘extended family’ network of supporters which is sustained by Regimental Headquarters, by reserve and cadet footprint, through the Regimental Association, the Museums and the Chapels, and by close and historic links with cities and boroughs.

A Regiment which Leads the Way. Our officers and soldiers have always led the way in developing and conducting innovative, forward-looking, and often irregular forms of warfare requiring a high state of training and resolute, independent action.

PASSAGE OF INFORMATION

Rapid passage of regimental information is often required. The Regimental Website has an important function in the universal dissemination of such information, but there will also be an occasional need for contact with individual members of the Regiment, serving and retired. In such cases, email is the preferred means of communication.

The Regimental Headquarters’ database holds contact details for all members of the Regiment, serving and retired, of whom it has knowledge, but can only be as comprehensive and accurate as the information provided by individual members. Retired members, and those serving away from battalions, are accordingly requested to keep Regimental Headquarters informed of their current address and contact details.

THE REGIMENTAL WEBSITE

The Regimental Website is set up to:

• Facilitate timely circulation of news, views and information about all matters of regimental interest.

• Publicise regimental achievements and generally project a positive image of the Regiment.

• Provide information for potential officer and soldier recruits to the Regiment.

• Provide a medium for liaison between all parts of the regimental family.

MOD WEBSITE

The MOD website has been updated to refresh a more modern British Army page that is now fresh and relevant. This is a good portal for those interested in a career in the Army in general, it allows general interest to be focussed on the Regiment and kick start a potential positive call to action.

THE REGIMENTAL JOURNAL

The regimental journal is entitled ‘Y Cymro’ and is published by Regimental Headquarters on or around St David’s day (1st March) annually. This in-depth look at regimental life is a key publication for all members of The Royal Welsh. This publication is widely read throughout the Royal Welsh community.
The editor is appointed by Regimental Headquarters. Each battalion shall have a sub-editor, normally the Senior Major or another field officer.

The objects of the journal are:

- To record and publicise the activities and achievements of all battalions of the Regiment, together with affiliated cadet units, the Regimental Association, and allied ships and regiments.
- To be a fundamental part of the Regiment's historical record.
- To be used for publicity and public relations purposes.
- To attract recruits, particularly potential officers.

‘Y Cymro’ shall aim to be financially self-sufficient but allowance will be made for any loss of revenue due to copies issued on a complimentary basis for recruiting and public relations purposes and for the significant, if indefinable, part the journal plays in promoting esprit de corps and the general well-being of all ranks past and present. All serving Day's Pay subscribers, including reserve soldiers whose contribution is paid centrally, shall be entitled to receive ‘Y Cymro’ without further payment. The normal method of payment for other subscribers shall be by standing order. The success of our regimental journal depends on lively contributions from all parts of the regimental family.

REGIMENTAL FORUMS

These means of communication are used by the comrades' associations and individual veterans to remain in touch with the Regiment. These forums can be very useful for communication to the more senior elements of the regimental family.

SECTION 16

RECRUITING

REGIMENTAL RECRUITING RESPONSIBILITIES

Recruiting is the lifeblood and future of the Regiment and it is a core obligation of commanders to ensure that this vital task is properly resourced. It is the responsibility of every officer, NCO and Fusilier to help bring in sufficient numbers of energetic and intelligent young men of strong motivation and character. Indeed, it is very much to the advantage of all ranks that our battalions are fully manned.

Officer Recruiting. Regimental Headquarters has lead responsibility however Battalions, those serving away and those that have left the Army have a vital role to play in finding and nurturing the high-quality leaders our soldiers deserve. The 1st Battalion will conduct potential officer familiarisation visits of high standard and appropriate style and provide the Regimental Selection Board members with reports. Potential officers are initially interviewed by the Regimental Adjutant and Regimental Secretary in RHQ Royal Welsh. Advice is given to the candidate depending on their progression in the officer recruitment pipeline and an initial assessment is made by the interviewers which will then start the profile report of the potential officer. Constant engagement and nurturing is essential to keeping potential officers interested and excited.

Soldier Recruiting. The Regimental Adjutant has lead responsibility, under the direction of Commanding Officer 3rd Battalion, but needs the support of both battalions, Regimental Headquarters, and indeed every member of the Regiment and regimental family. Soldier recruiting is heavily influenced by external factors that affect the policies, commitment and strategies that The Royal Welsh implement in order to recruit. The soldier recruiting environment is complex and continually evolving and it is therefore vital for the recruiting elements to understand the contemporary dynamics and to adjust accordingly.

THE REGIMENTAL AREA OF THE ROYAL WELSH

106
The Royal Welsh recruits throughout Wales however this is also the recruiting area for the Welsh Guards and Parachute Regiment within the Infantry and arms and services such as the RA, RLC, REME, Int Corps and AGC. Our recruiters therefore need to be of the highest quality to compete.

REGIMENTAL RECRUITING POLICY

The Regimental Recruiting strategy is to:

- Establish, both conceptually and physically, the Regiment as the predominant force in Army recruiting in Wales.
- Adopt a regimental approach to recruiting (regular and reserve) in order to make best use of resources.
- Continue to nurture our future soldiers during their progression through the Army application process and support them where possible.
- Conduct a continuous public relations campaign across all media, social media and the internet to raise and subsequently maintain a high regimental profile in our recruiting area and to reinforce a positive regimental image.
- Ensure that where possible every recruiting office in the recruiting area is staffed by a Regimental NCO and that the Regiment is well represented in the Army Recruiting Teams.
- Use regimental recruiting teams to target and nurture promising sources of recruits and, by following up enquiries, maximise the enquiry to enlistment ratio.
- Pay particular attention to providing training support to the Army Cadet Force, Combined Cadet Force and Wales Officer Training Corps contingents in order to foster an attachment to the Regiment.
- Co-ordinate our activities with other recruiting agencies to make best use of Army resources.

These themes will be developed in Regimental Committee and in regimental recruiting directives issued by the Colonel of the Regiment.

RECRUITS UNDER TRAINING

The recruiting process does not end with enlistment but is only completed when a well-trained and highly motivated soldier joins one of our battalions. The Regimental Recruiting staff, together with our Regimental representatives in the Army Training units and our Regimental Shepherd will take a particular care with recruits under training. They are to be regularly visited, encouraged and made to feel part of the regimental family. Some regimental items of uniform and equipment as well as some financial support for regimental functions in Army Training units will be provided on application to Regimental Headquarters.

INTERNAL RECRUITING / RETENTION

Considerable recruiting effort may be saved if enough trained soldiers prolong their Colour service, while the proportion of seasoned and experienced soldiers in the ranks will have a profound effect on battalion effectiveness. Officers and NCOs at all levels must therefore make it their business to encourage suitable soldiers to extend their service.

SECTION 17

REGIMENTAL DRESS REGULATIONS

‘The better you dress a soldier, the more highly will he be thought of by the women, and consequently by himself’.

Field Marshal Lord Wolseley

INTRODUCTION

1. These Regulations have been approved by the Colonel of The Regiment and are in accordance with Queen’s Regulations, Dress Regulations for Officers of the Army, and the decisions of the Army Dress Committee.
2. No amendments to, or variation from, these Regulations may be made without the specific prior approval of the Colonel of The Regiment.

3. These Regulations cover most likely dress requirements at Regimental Duty. Officers, warrant officers and NCOs taking up overseas training or representational appointments should, however, take advice on local requirements. If still in doubt about the more unusual orders of dress, consult Dress Regulations for Officers of the Army or seek guidance from RHQ.

4. All ranks of the Regiment are individually responsible for maintaining their uniform, accoutrements and equipment up to scale and in a serviceable condition. Certain articles of clothing referred to in these regulations are not obligatory, and others are a personal purchase, but if worn they must be of the pattern laid down.

AWARD OF COLOURS FOR SHOOTING AND SPORT

INTRODUCTION

The Regiment places a high value on personal fitness, teamwork and skill at arms. The purpose of awarding Battalion Colours is to encourage and reward prowess in shooting and sport, activities which make a vital contribution to unit morale and efficiency.

MINIMUM QUALIFICATIONS FOR AWARD OF COLOURS

The minimum qualifications required for the award of Battalion Colours are:

SHOOTING
- To have represented the Battalion at least in the Divisional or District or equivalent rifle meeting.
- To have been selected to represent the Battalion in one of the ARA central or non-central competitions.
- To have shot at a consistently high standard throughout the season.

SPORTS
- To have represented the Battalion in at least fifty per cent of the First Team matches in any one season.
- To have represented the Battalion in at least two First Team major competition games during the season.
- To have shown a consistently high standard of play throughout the season.

PROCEDURE FOR AWARD OF COLOURS

Toward the end of the season the officers in charge of shooting and sports will recommend to the Commanding Officer the names of those whom they consider qualify for the award of Colours. Final decision as to the award of Battalion Colours will rest with the Commanding Officer. In general, the award of colours will indicate an outstanding distinction in the field of activity concerned and, whenever practicable, the award will be made by the Commanding Officer on some suitable public occasion.

Colours will be awarded annually in accordance with the proficiency shown by individuals in each season. The fact that an individual has previously been awarded Colours will not be taken into consideration. Those awarded Colours are entitled to wear the Battalion Colours tie which will be presented at cost to the Battalion PRI. Once awarded he or she may thereafter wear the Battalion Colours tie.

COLOURS TIE

The Colours tie is green superimposed with small regimental capbadges.
